Government, Private Jobs in Conflict In Brand Case

WASHINGTON — Charley Brand, one of the powers in the Agricultural Adjustment Association, is a genial soul, but he has a remarkable fondness for storing up trouble for himself.

His latest faux pas, in any other Administration, would have been enough to bring a resignation.

During the summer, Charley sent out letters to members of the National Fertilizer Association inviting them to attend the annual convention at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. Among the attractions offered to induce attendance was a list of speakers on which was the name of "Charles Brand—Co-Administrator of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration."

That was all right. No one objects to any government official making speeches.

But the letter was signed: "Charles Brand, Executive Secretary of the National Fertilizer Association."

Now it is a fixed rule that no official can hold a private job unless it is clearly shown it does not conflict with the government job. It is Charley Brand's job as Co-Administrator of the A. A. A. to fight for the interests of the farmer, to tax the processors in behalf of the farmer. But as Secretary of the National Fertilizer Association, it is Charley Brand's job to sell fertilizer to the farmers.

The situation has become one of the most talked of incidents of the Agricultural Department.

Stamps and Politics

One member of the present Administration owes his job to the Roosevelt passion for postage stamps.

Alvin W. Hall has been retained as Director of the Bureau of Printing and Engraving despite the fact that he is a hangover of the old Reed Smoot dynasty—and all because of postage stamps.

Hall has been a frequent visitor at the White House with rare and unusual stamps. He takes them to Little Louey Howe, also an ardent philatelist, who takes many of them into the President.

Hall organized one of the most unusual stamp collections in the country to represent his Bureau at the Century of Progress. He collected all the stamps ever issued by the United States and is now working on an even better collection, both of which eventually will be given to F. D. R.

The collection will include an example of every commemorative stamp ever issued by the United States since 1898—the year commemorative stamps were first issued. It will be one of the finest collections in the world.

Young Jimmy Roosevelt

Trouble is increasing over the efforts of Young Jimmy Roosevelt to dominate Democracy in Massachusetts.

A terrific feud is on between Jimmy on one side, with Governor Joseph B. Ely and Senator David Ignatius Walsh on the other. They claim that Jimmy has set himself up as "Crown Prince of Massachusetts," that he plans to run for Governor.

Both sides are making themselves look rather silly.

Governor Ely began it first. Before the Chicago convention he had fought desperately for his friend, Al Smith. But walking down an aisle of the convention hall after his father's triumphant victory, Jimmy Roosevelt saw Ely, stuck out his hand, wanted to shake hands.

Ely put his hand behind his back.

Since then Jimmy has shown sardonic glee in robbing Ely and Walsh of almost every scrap of patronage. Politically they have

COMPANION HURT

Driver of Other Automobile Put in Jail

Mrs. Mary G. Beck, Northridge-rd, received severe cuts on the forehead, nose and lower face, and Andrew J. Casselle, N. Scioto-st, plant superintendent of the Container Corporation of America, suffered a cut on the chin and chest bruises, when the DeSoto coupe in which they were riding, driven by Mr. Casselle, was sideswiped by a Chevrolet sedan driven by Russell Barlow, 2025 11th-st, Huntington, W. Va., on the Scioto trail, one half mile south of Circleville, at 9 p. m. Saturday.

Mr. Barlow was arrested immediately after the accident by Sheriff Charles Radcliff for investigation and held in the county jail until 4 p. m. Sunday when he was released after making arrangements to pay damages.

YOUTH IS KILLED

NEWARK, Sept. 18.—Another name was added today to the list of victims in this year's hunting accidents with the death of Lawrence Waters, 19, from wounds received when he was accidentally shot near here.

Waters suffered a full charge of shot in the right thigh from the gun of Ben Shirley, with whom he was squirrel hunting.

OCCURS ON HILL

The mishap occured on the hill in front of the Jacob Dumm farm. Mr. Casselle and Mrs. Beck were enroute to Chillicothe and Barlow, accompanied by his wife and mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary Hendrick of Cox's Landing, W. Va., was going to Columbus to visit the latter's sister. The Barlow car suddenly sideswiped Mr. Casselle's auto, both cars bounding to opposite sides of the road. Mrs. Beck was thrown against the windshield breaking the glass, and her knees struck the dash-board inflicting cuts. Mr. Casselle was forced against the steering wheel sustaining a bruised chest and also suffering a cut on the chin from flying glass.

Mrs. Barlow and Mrs. Hendrick were thrown from the Chevrolet as it struck a fence on the west side of the road, but escaped injury. Mr. Barlow, too, was uninjured.

A passing motorist brought Mr. Casselle and Mrs. Beck to this city where their injuries were treated by Dr. H. D. Jackson. Sheriff Radcliff returned the occupants of the other car to Circleville placing Mr. Barlow in jail. The latter's wife and Mrs. Hendrick were quartered at the Hotel Boggs.

AUTOS DAMAGED

Mr. Casselle's DeSoto coupe was towed to the E. E. Clifton garage for repairs. The left front wheel was torn off and the front of the car was badly damaged. The left running board and left front wheel were torn from Barlow's Chevrolet car.

While more than a score of airplanes hopped off from Cleveland airport in the third day of the hunt, many coastguard craft and private boats plied the waters of Lake Erie hunting for a trace of the missing plane.

WILL TO HELP REVISE NATION BANKING LAWS

Local Banker Drafted By F. M. Law, President of Association.

WORK IS IMPORTANT

Committee To Work With Next Congress.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 18.—Clark Will, of the Third National Bank, at Circleville, today was listed here as officially chosen by the American Bankers Association to take part in the important deliverations by which bankers hope to aid in shaping changes in the banking laws at the coming session of congress.

F. M. Law, new president of the association, made the selection of leaders to work on the many problems in their relation to legislation soon to be studied by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee.

With R. F. C. entering into so many fields of financing for recovery and with the deposit insurance law to go into effect January 1, bankers will find much of their time taken up with study of legislative and administrative steps here in the coming months.

Law therefore picked a few men to be his associates, naming them after the Chicago convention, and thus the Circleville banker, who is president of the Ohio Bankers Association, was honored.

LEGION TO ELECT

It is urged that all legionnaires attend with refreshments to follow the meeting.

LOCAL CHURCH HOST TO 1934 SYNOD SESSION

Trinity Lutheran Church Votes to Accept; 300 to Attend

DR. POPPEN HEAD

United Brethren Also to Meet in City

Following on the heels of the selection of this city as host for the district United Brethren conference in 1934, it was announced that Trinity Lutheran church will be the scene of the annual meeting of the Ohio synod of the American Lutheran church next year.

The synod meeting will begin the Tuesday after Labor Day.

The meeting was offered to the local church at the conclusion of the session in Columbus this year.

DELAY APPOINTMENTS

Appointment of Methodist Episcopal ministers was delayed somewhat Monday by last-minute difficulties. It was expected the pastor to fill the vacancy left in the local pulpit by the untimely death of Rev. Charles H. Eichinger would be announced sometime during the morning but word from conference headquarters was that the selection would not be disclosed until late this afternoon.

At Sunday morning service the church members voted to accept the offer. Dr. G. J. Troutman stated that the synod would meet in Cleveland if the local church did not accept the bid.

300 WILL ATTEND

The meeting will be a large one with 300 delegates expected to attend. Three hundred and thirty-five congregations are included in the synod being served by 225 ministers.

Dr. Emmanuel Poppen, of Columbus, is president of the synod and Dr. Troutman is a member of the mission board.

The last time the Ohio synod met here was in 1922.

With the U. B. conference also scheduled for September, Circleville during that month in 1934 will become a real church city.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 18. — The hands of Ohio Methodism today were raised in pledge to a new crusade for prohibition.

Despite preponderant odds with the states of the nation lining up one after the other for repeal of the 18th amendment, 3,500 persons attending the temperance anniversary rally of the Ohio conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church here last night, stood in unison at the call of Dr. Howard H. PRESIDENT ILL

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—President Roosevelt was confined to his bedroom today with a mild cold accompanied by a slight temperature.

The president's illness was not at all serious but Lt. Comdr. Ross McIntyre, naval physician, advised him not to exert himself and to stay away from his office today.

All appointments with the president were cancelled except those of Secretary of the Treasury Woodin and Secretary of Commerce Roper. Woodin called on the president shortly before 10 o'clock and remained about an hour. Roper was to call later in the day.

Rail Detective, Who Acted Here, Critically Wounded

James E. Towne, a Baltimore and Ohio railroad detective, of Columbus, who last Monday escaped brutal treatment at the hands of three negroes whom he ordered off a southbound Chesapeake and Ohio railroad freight train, south of Circleville, is in a serious condition at Mt Carmel hospital, Columbus with a bullet wound near his heart which he received in a similar circumstance near Grove City Sunday.

Two negroes, Elias Bell, 26, and Roosevelt Clayton, 36, both of Birmingham, Ala., were arrested several hours after the shooting and are being held in Franklin-co jail for questioning. Both deny any complicity in the shooting.

According to Franklin-co sheriff's deputies, as the freight train enroute from Pittsburg to Cincinnatti passed near Urbancrest, negro settlement between Columbus and Grove City, Towne approached several train riders and ordered them off the train. They struggled with him, took his weapon and shot him, then jumped from the train and ran toward Columbus. A motorist took the wounded man to Mt. Carmel hospital.

The incident closely parallels Towne's experience here last week. Monday afternoon he ordered three negroes from a C. and O. southbound train, south of this city. They refused and when Towne started to enforce his order they jumped on him and attempted to grab his gun. Several workmen came along and two of the negroes ran away, while the third, Henry Brown, was held by Towne and brought to this city where the latter placed a charge of resisting an officer against him. Brown was fined $25 and costs and sentenced to serve five days in the city prison by Mayor Hedges.

Brown was released Friday after serving the five days. The fine was suspended.

JEAN HARLOW

Platinum Blonde, 22, and Howard Rosson, 38, Married At Yuma.

COMES AS SURPRISE

Is Third Venture For Vivacious Actress.

YUMA, Ariz., Sept. 18.—Jean Harlow, 22, platinum blonde film star, was married here at 4:30 o'clock this morning to Harold G. Rosson, 38, Hollywood photographer, as the climax to a romantic airplane elopement from Hollywood.

They arrived shortly before 4 o'clock, obtaining a license, and were married by E. A. Freesom, Yuma's "marrying justice of the peace."

When the couple applied for the license Miss Harlow gave her name as Harlene Carpenter Bern.

She was the widow of Paul Bern, who was a Hollywood film executive.

THIRD MARRIAGE

It was Miss Harlow's third marriage and her second romantic elopement. When 16 years of age she eloped with Charles F. McGrew, II., wealthy young Chicago broker. They were divorced Jan. 29. 1931.

On July 2, 1931 she married Bern. Their romance came as a surprise to even close friends. There was no elopement, however, a quiet home wedding being attended by a number of the close screen colony friends of the couple at the home of her parents in Hollywood. Their romance was revealed when they applied for a marriage license in Los Angles.

On Sept. 10 of the same year, Bern was found dead in his home, a coroner's jury later finding that he had committed suicide.

After a wedding breakfast in a nearby deserted little desert cafe Rosson and his beautiful young bride departed for Los Angeles.

Edward Shaffer, 43, Found Dead By Sister at County Infirmary.

FUNERAL TUESDAY

Despondency Over Finances Named As Cause.

Edward Shaffer, 43, employed as a farmer at the Pickaway-co infirmary for a number of years, committed suicide Sunday night by drinking strychnine. The suicide verdict was returned by Coroner C. E. Bowers after he investigated the death.

Mr. Shaffer was reported in financial difficulties.

He was last seen alive shortly before sundown Sunday by Henry Euhring, an employe at the home, who saw him walk past the disposal plant and drop to the ground. Euhring thought nothing of the act until he was notified Monday morning that Shaffer was missing.

FOUND BY SISTER

Mr. Shaffer's body was found by his sister, Mrs. Clinton Stout, who was walking from her home across a field to the infirmary where she is employed as a general helper. She saw the body lying on the ground near the path but not recognizing it went on to the house where she was informed Mr. Shaffer was missing.

Mrs. Stout with Sam Thomas and H. E. Mowery, home superintendent, returned to the place and found the body. A small portion of strychnine remained in the bottle.

Mr. Shaffer was lying on his face when the searchers found

Storm Damages N. England Coast

Highways, Railroads Washed Out With Single Life Reported Lost.

BOSTON, Sept. 18.—Deluged by the heaviest downpour in half a century, new England began to repair washed out bridges, highways and railroad tracks, refloat sunken and beached small craft, pump out flooded cellars and resume disrupted air and ocean traffic.

One life was lost in the storm. James Mulholland of Bradley, Me., was swept to his death in the river at Orono during a gallant attempt to rescue Doris Sherman. Miss Sherman was rescued.

Two Nantucket fishing boats with four men each aboard were the Massa, and the Anna C. Perry. They were being sought by coastguard craft.

Many thousands of dollars damage was left in the wake of the 48 hour rain storm, the tail end of the tropical hurricane which swept out to sea before lashing New England with the brunt of its fury.

A sentence to the Ohio penitentiary and two paroles were handed out to three prisoners indicted by the recent grand jury by Judge J. W. Adkins Saturday afternoon and Monday. Two pleas of "not guilty" were also heard in an arraignment Monday.

Robert "Lefty" McLarren, Walnut-st, changed his former plea of "not guilty" to "guilty" on a charge of burglarizing the home of Mrs. Virgie Hall, Chillicothe, formerly of Walnut-st, July 6, and stealing a seven tube Apex radio, and was sentenced to the Ohio penitentiary for not less than five or more than 30 years. Sterling Lamb was his attorney. He was taken to the Ohio penitentiary Monday afternoon.

John Cain, Williamsport, convicted of breaking and entering the granary of Elmer Ater, near Williamsport, and stealing 15 bushels of wheat, and Robert Reynolds, Yellowbud, charged with forging and uttering a bad check, were placed on parole for two years following their guilty pleas.

Master Code, to Also Include Construction, is Being Studied

PRICES IN QUESTION

Ford Problem Now Near Administration

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18. — Master codes for retailers and the construction industry, involving upwards of 10,000,000 employes today became the goal of Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, as the bituminous coal code went to the White House.

Although the retail and construction codes have been eclipsed by the bitter fight over coal, recovery officials hold them even more important because they extend into every nook and corner of the nation.

A master code for retailers, worked out by Deputy Administrator A. D. Whiteside, now is on Johnson's desk, with a code embracing more than a score of branches of the construction industry about ready for action.

"PRICE-FIXING"

In the retail code Johnson faced a decision on the major question of price-fixing—a question which may have to be answered finally by President Roosevelt.

Although Johnson has approved price control features in both the coal and oil codes, he refuses to label them price-fixing. He has indicated he would approve a provision in a retail code forbidding selling below wholesale cost, plus ten per cent.

Price-fixing already has been attacked by the consumers advisory board of which Mrs. Mary Rumsey, is chairman. The exact form of retail price control also is the subject of a battle between leading retail interests.

Many other problems vital to the NRA also claimed Johnson's attention as he emerged from the coal code battle.

He plans to swing into the job of reorganizing the entire NRA staff, which has grown to embrace 1,000 workers. The period of transition from negotiation of codes to the job of enforcing and administering them has arrived, according to Johnson.

PLAN LOCAL BOARDS

By setting up local compliance boards Johnson has paved the way for enforcement, by persuasion chiefly, of the temporary Blue Eagle agreements with the President He also must be prepared to enforce provisions of the permanent codes.

The problem of Henry Ford, the auto manufacturer, thus was brought closer to the recovery administration. An investigation to determine if Ford is complying with the automobile code is expected to be made within the next two weeks.

Local compliance boards were

2 STATES VOTE

New Mexico and Idaho Expected To Join March For Repeal.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Sept. 18.—New Mexico was prepared to go to the polls tomorrow and express a decided preference for repeal of the Eighteenth amendment.

The vote generally anticipated will give repeal a majority of about two to one, although some repealists predict a three-to-one majority. Gov. Arthur Seligman expressed the opinion that every county in the state would favor repeal.

New Mexico went dry by a two to one majority in 1917.

BOISE, Idaho, Sept. 18.—With a rift imminent in the ranks of the churches and with the din of last minute pulpit exhortations fresh in their ears, Idaho voters prepared to go to the polls tomorrow on the national repeal issue.

Conservative wets predicted a 3 to 2 majority and estimates ranged as high as 2 to 1.

MAN, 28, KILLED IN LANCASTER WRECK

LANCASTER, Sept. 18.—Floyd Westenbarger, 28, died at City Hospital here today from a skull fracture received when his automobile collided last night with one driven by Miss Julia O'Gara.

Westenbarger was pitched out of his car by the force of the collision. He fell across the hood of the O'Gara automobile and was caught beneath the machine as it overturned.

TWO RAIDS MADE

Members of the sheriff's office made two unsuccessful liquor raids at New Holland Saturday night.

Heise Is Hope Of Red Birds

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 18.—Backs to the wall but nevertheless determined, the Columbus Red Birds planned to send their southpaw ace, Clarence Heise, to the mound today in an effort to gain the series edge over the Millers. The local team evened the playoff by defeating Bill Lee, 6-4, in an exciting contest Sunday, the first in the city.

Manager Dave Bancroft is expected to use Harry Holsclaw who defeated the Red Bird youth in a Columbus-played game. He may send Hi Vandenberg to the hill, however.

Home runs marked the Sunday contest with the Millers getting two and the Red Birds one. Harris' home run with one on base was the deciding blow. Holland's came early in the game with no one on base.

Two errors by Borgman at shortstop and a misjudged fly by Nick Cullop were costly to the Red Birds.

Cullop hit a home run with two mates on in the inning in which Jess Petty was driven off the hill. Walter Tauscher finished the game and received credit for the victory.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 18.—Filled with the confidence of a one-game lead, the Rochester Red Wings will play the Buffalo Bisons here tonight in the second game of the final playoff series in the International baseball league. The winners of four of the seven-game series will meet the American association winner in the little world's series.

Tony Kaufmann of the Wings gave the Bisons only tour hits in the opening game of the series Sunday, Rochester winning 1 to 0. Gailivan of the Bisons lost the hurling duel, allowing six safeties.

3 MATCHES PLAYED IN TITLE TOURNEY

Several matches, all of which were interesting, were played in the Pickaway Country club championship tournament Sunday.

Frank Casey, local pro, urges that all matches be played as soon as possible.

John Bragg eliminated James Walker in a splendid match by a 1 up margin; Freeman Jones shot an 85 on Charles Gilmore to win his match by a three and one edge and K. J. Herrman eliminated Claude Kraft 1 up taking the verdict on the eighteenth hole.

Good golf featured all three matches.

Her Love Costly

Anna Kruger, 22, of Woodline, N. J., for love of whom William Hartle, 28, of Glendale, L. His attentions unwelcome, Hartle tried strong-arm methods with the foregoing result.

NEW CHAMPION

Dunlap Wins U. S. Amateur

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—The score board said that he had lost the Amateur golf championship of the United States to George Dunlap, Jr., by six up and five to play but to Max Marston the margin of defeat was represented by eight inches. In effect, that's about what he said yesterday, anyhow, as he rode back from the scene of his tragic defeat at Cincinnati in the final round of the championship on Saturday.

"Did you know that eight putts stopped an inch from the cup during the morning round?" he said.

As a matter of fact, I did. But their significance was lost during the general furore brought on and created by Dunlap's record-equalling 68. When a thing like that is going on, one recognizes positive and not negative results. One is impressed only with the fact that Dunlap had four birdies and thirteen pars; that not once was he off the fairway, that he wasn't in a trap until late in the afternoon.

Yet though this was perfection, it might have been bettered. Eight inches more, taken one at a time, and this needn't have been mockery in the name of competition. It could have been a golf match.

New York Can Clinch Title

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.-Manager Bill Terry of the New York Giants, who first saw the light of day 34 years ago in Atlanta, Ga., and probably at the time never gave the thing a thought, today reached out to grab a piece of bunting and a bit of fame.

Terry's Giants can win the National league pennant race today.

If they win from St. Louis and Pittsburgh drops one to Philadelphia this afternoon, the long grind will be over. Chicago's Cubs passed out of the picture Sunday.

Two victories for the New Yorkers and three more for the Washington Senators will make the two clubs mathematically certain of facing each other in the world's series next month. Washington has ten more games to play and the Giants eleven.

Lusitania Hoard Lures Undersea Explorers

S. S. LUSITANIA — EXPLORER'S MECHANICAL ARM.

Using his 22-foot submarine, Explorer, Simon Lake, famous inventor of undersea craft, of Bridgeport, Conn., hopes to succeed in a forthcoming attempt to reach the wreck of the liner Lusitania, in her ocean grave off the Irish Coast, where she was torpedoed in 1916. The diminutive submarine attained a depth of 300 feet in initial tests in Long Island Sound, and as the sunken liner lies in only 200 feet of water, it is reasonable to concede the Lake expedition an excellent chance of succeeding in the venture. The strong room of the liner is said to contain about $4,000,000 in gold and silver, as well as a large quantity of precious stones and other jewelry.

Defamatory Words

Defamatory words are those which injure the reputation of another. If written and published they constitute libel; if spoken, slander. Libel is usually regarded more seriously than slander because the written word suggests premeditation, and has more permanence than a slander, which is often uttered in the heat of the moment.

lease of Bailey by force were expected to be taken by the authorities. Sinister rumors have been current.

The twelve defendants include two of the most notorious "Bad Men" in the west. One of this pair is Bailey, the other Albert L. Bates, an ex-convict and jail breaker.

Bailey was a leader of one of the most dangerous criminal gangs in the country. He was trapped on August 14 as he slept on a cot, surrounded by a small arsenal of weapons, on a farm near Paradise, Texas. Not only is he accused of being the "master mind" of the Urschel kidnaping, but the authorities lay at his door the machine gun slaying of five men at the Kansas City union station.

Bates was arrested in Denver by department of justice officials who identified him as George Bates, a suspect in the Urschel kidnaping. He escaped from the Van Buren county jail in Paw Paw, Michigan, on Christmas day, 1931. He has a long criminal record.

The other ten defendants were taken into custody at Paradise, Texas, St. Paul and Minneapolis. One of them is Mrs. Ora L. Shannon whose husband owned the farm near Paradise where Bailey was captured.

It was at the Shannon farm that Urschel allegedly was held captive from July 23 to July 31. His fingerprints were said to have been found there after the government staged a spectacular airplane and automobile raid and captured Bailey.

$200,000 PAID

Urschel was taken from his palatial home in Oklahoma City on the night of July 22. It is charged that he was spirited by automobile to the Shannon ranch and kept hidden there for nine days. After his release on the reported payment of $200,000 in cash he furnished clews which led to the arrest of Bailey at Paradise and Bates in Denver.

Shannon, owner of the farm near Paradise, Mrs. Shannon and their 21-year-old son, Armon Shannon, were also arrested and all three are among the defendants.

Martin is Facing Many Obstacles As Week Starts

HAVANA, Sept. 18.—Surviving wild rumors of revolts that failed to materialize and threatened general strikes, President Ramon Grau San Martin's government today entered its third week in power over the destiny of Cuba.

The greatest obstacles facing the administration appeared to be those which have confronted it since birth — the controversy with the ousted army officers at the National hotel and a threat of the association of commercial owners to close their stores tomorrow in protest against present economic conditions.

These owners conferred with Grau San Martin, but did not discuss a possible strike and listened only to his plans for conducting the government, reviving business and restoring the republic to normal conditions.

STAYING AT HOME

The owners were reported privately to be fearful of widening labor demands for higher wages. They complained that business is stagnant because the people are staying at home.

Contrarily, however, the greatest crowds in the recent history of Havana thronged the plaza of the Malecon and Prado last night. Hordes of children played in the parks and streets and along the sea wall.

This correspondent personally saw between 50,000 and 100,000 adults and 3,000 children happily parading about the city. The oldest residents of Havana expressed astonishment at their numbers and their carefree attitude.

This was generally taken as indicating public satisfaction with the government, despite political and commercial opposition.

The island was reported tranquil by the army following yesterday's clash in Managua, where Major Jose Del Gado, former chief of the national police, was arrested by the army.

His arrest required a brief battle and an exchange of shots. He was wanted for alleged crimes under the Machado regime. Dr. Alejandro Vergara, an innocent bystander, was wounded in the affray. Four others were also arrested.

Otherwise, there were no uprisings reported. Col. Fulgencio Batista disparaged threats of the store owners that they would close their shops, but it was apparent the army was ready to use its soldiers to open and operate food stores if necessary.

Batista said the entire island was more peaceful than it had been in years, with quiet prevailing in every province.

New Cuban Head Noted Surgeon

Dr. Ramon Grau San Martin, appointed by the Revolutionary Junta as Provisional President of Cuba, is that rara avis, a President who belongs to no political party. Forty-nine years old, wealthy and a bachelor, Dr. Grau San Martin comes of a distinguished family of Pinar Del Rio. He was educated at the University of Havana, where he afterwards held the chair of anatomy and won a reputation as one of Cuba's foremost physicians. In 1930 he was elected to head the students' directorate, which was then protesting the action of General Machado in closing the schools and colleges of the island. For his activities as a Machado oppositionist Grau San Martin spent 16 months in exile. His popularity with the powerful student body is credited with raising him to the highest post in Cuba.

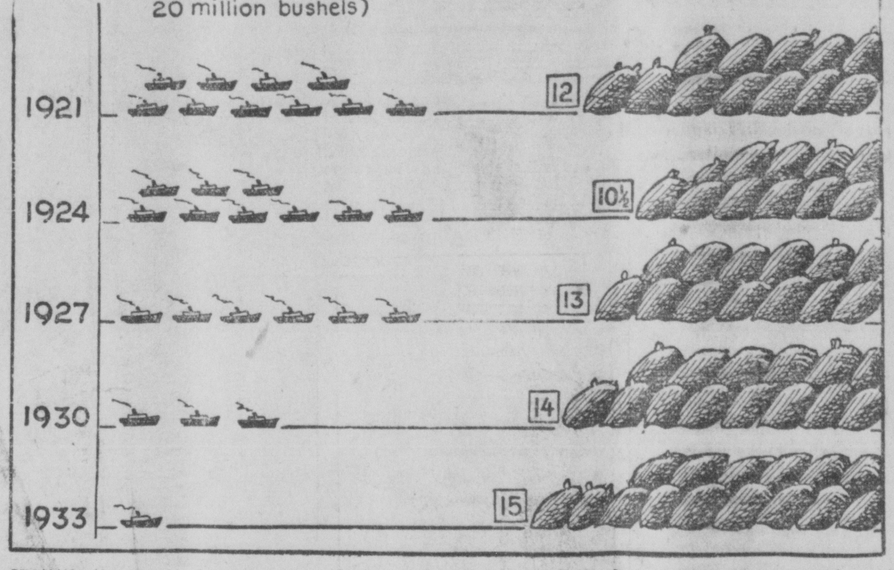
Wheat: U. S. Exports to Europe and Production in Europe



WHEN Europe produces more wheat for herself she buys less from the United States. That is the feature of the world wheat problem that this chart shows. For instance, in 1921, when many wheat ships were busy carrying the bread grain to Europe, that continent produced only 1,200,000,000 bushels. Since 1927, European countries have been producing more and more of their own wheat and the wheat traffic across the Atlantic has slowed up. In fact, efforts of European countries to supply their needs, and their buying wheat from other countries has just about cut off our wheat exports, as the lone boat for 1933 represented in the chart indicates. The United States doesn't want to withdraw from the export trade, but rather than have grain pile up in the United States or be sold at less than cost, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration has begun a wheat plan which will reduce acreage in the United States and bring production down to the point where it can all be marketed at a profit to the farmer.

Lamson Desires Hanging Over Life Term in Jail

SAN JOSE, Cal., Sept. 18. —A special "suicide guard" of deputy sheriffs today was established over David A. Lamson.

Sheriff William J. Emig made the drastic move following a report from Lamson's cellmate that the handsome Stanford university press executive, facing death on the gallows for the murder of his wife, was suffering from "fits of deep despondency."

"We'll take no chances with this prisoner now," the sheriff said. "We want to deliver him safely to San Quentin prison."

A relay of deputies then was counted off to watch Lamson "closely night and day."

However, there were no indications from the prisoner himself that he contemplated self destruction.

He smiled slightly, he had "slept well," and then reiterated his astounding declaration that he would " a thousand times rather hang than go to prison for life."

The death sentence is scheduled to be pronounced upon him tomorrow by Superior Judge Roberg R. Syer in accordance with the verdict brought in Saturday night.

A jury of seven men and five women, after eight hours of deliberating the evidence presented in a four-weeks trial, returned a verdict of "guilty of murder in the first degree."

Because they did not impose a life sentence. It is mandatory upon the court to order Lamson "hanged by the neck until dead."

Conviction was obtained upon the contention by the state that the 31-year-old defendant, a former Stanford dramatic and journalistic favorite, had beaten his pretty young wife, Allene Thorpe Lamson, to death in their campus bungalow because of an infatuation with a blonde divorce in Sacramento, Calif.

Lamson will be taken to San Quentin within ten days after the imposing of sentence.

An appeal for a new trial will be taken, according to Lamson's attorneys, on the grounds of "errors by the court, misconduct of the district attorney and a verdict not supported by the evidence."

Lamson insists he stands squarely for either freedom or death.

A Thing Not To Be Explained

By IRVIN S. COBB

IT IS narrated of two colored men that they set forth one night to borrow a hog. Not until nearly daylight did they succeed in borrowing one from the pig-pen of a planter. Having slaughtered the prize they decided that it should be left in the cabin of one of them until the following night, when the other would come to claim his share.

During the day the present custodian, while immersing the carcass in a barrel of brine to prevent it from spoiling, decided that he needed all the meat for himself. Accordingly he removed it to a suitable hiding-place and then, returning home, awaited the arrival of his partner in the enterprise of the night before.

About eight o'clock the second negro arrived, carrying an empty sack over his arm.

"Whar's de meat, Sam?" he asked, as he entered the cabin.

"In dat barrel of brine over yonder behind de back do'. Jes' go over and he'p you'se'f to yore sheer."

The caller rolled up his sleeves and immersed his arms in the brine.

"Tain't no meat here," he said, after a thorough search.

"I ain't s'prised one bit," said Sam. "Rats is gettin' so bad 'round yere I don't know whut I'm gwine do. Dey carries off ever'thing. I 'spects dey was eatin' dat po'k w'en I heard 'em nibblin' today w'ile I was layin' down tryin' to sleep."

His friend stiffened suspiciously.

"How come dey could nibble a hole in de barrel, eat all de po'k an' still de brine don't run out?" he demanded.

Sam took a deep breath.

"Dat," he said, "is de mystery."

TURNER BREAKS OWN AIR MARK; WINS BENDIX CUP

Nerves Never Waver

LOS ANGELES — Colonel Roscoe Turner flashed across the finish line here 11 hours, 30 minutes out of New York, breaking his own coast-to-coast record for the westward flight and winning the annual running of the Bendix Trophy.

Forty-eight thousand spectators were on hand to greet the plucky pilot whose healthy nerves had carried him to victory. For a second time the coveted ... was his. One of the Colonel's first ... was for a Camel. Asked by a ... man if steady smoking ... nerves, Turner ...

"I WATCH MY NERVES as carefully as I do my plane," Colonel Turner says. "I smoke Camels for the sake of healthy nerves, and I enjoy them more because of their mildness and better taste. To me Camels are a much finer cigarette and I never have to give a thought to jangled nerves."

A MATCHLESS BLEND

IT IS MORE FUN TO KNOW

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

Steady Smokers turn to Camels

COLONEL ROSCOE TURNER, in discussing healthy nerves and cigarettes, says:

"Breaking air records is an exciting business—and a nerve-wracking one! I know because I have gone out after a whole flock of records—and managed to pick off quite a few. Like most pilots I smoke a lot—in fact, I enjoy smoking any time. But I watch my nerves as carefully as I do my plane. I smoke Camels for the sake of healthy nerves, and I enjoy them more because of their mildness and better taste. To me Camels are a much finer cigarette, and being a faithful Camel smoker, I never have to give a thought to jangled nerves."

Are you nervous? Irritable? Try Camels and get a fresh slant on your smoking. Being a milder cigarette, Camels are better for steady smoking. You will find that Camels never get on your nerves...never tire your taste.

Further Steps Needed

LEGISLATION to supplement the new federal securities act is in prospect, in the opinion of William B. Herlands, of New York, assistant United States attorney. Its enactment is believed assured unless proper steps are taken by stock exchanges or individual states to correct practices which the securities act failed to cover.

"The problem of fraudulent stock manipulantion,' Mr. Herlands says, "was the starting point of the investigation conducted by the senate committee on banking and currency, but this was entirely disregarded in the present securities act. Stock-market manipulation could be controlled by a statute regulating the stock exchange. Unless the stock exchanges of the individual states promptly undertake to remedy the more vicious stock-market practices, many competent observers believe that congress will pass regulatory legislation within the next year."

The securities act deals exclusively with the underwriting, the issuance and the distribution of stocks. There remain, says Mr. Herlands, "the equally important problems of the formation of corporations and stock-market manipulation after the initial distribution of secrities."

Adequate protection, of the public will not be afforded until improper practices in connection with these activities are penalized. The securities act was a step in the right direction, but it was only a step. It would be better if the stock exchanges themselves or the states would regard it as a warning and act accordingly by completing the task. If they will not, however, there is little possibility that the federal government will refrain from doing the job. The matter is likely to come before the next session of congress, with the consequent danger that the latter may go further than conditions really demand.

This possibility could be avoided by the exchanges themselves cleaning house. So far, though, there has been little indication that this will be done.

Uniting the Americans

THE proposal of President Rodriguez of Mexico that an American league of nations be formed for dealing with international questions affecting the countries of this hemisphere contains interesting possibilities.

It recognizes that the American nations have problems peculiar to themselves and that means of solving these peacefully and without the intervention of outside agencies should be found. His suggestion for creating an association of American nations is expected to take concrete form at the Pan-American conference in Montevideo in December, when Mexican representatives will propose the formation of an inter-American court of justice and an inter-American labor office.

The Mexican president's ideas relative to binding the Americas together closely approach an economic Monroe doctrine for these nations. Economic cooperation of all American nations would be fostered under the plan.

To what extent his views may be regarded as reflecting those of other American nations is unknown. They bear a close resemblance, however, to policies of the United States in its relations with its southern neighbors, and Washington support for his program would cause no surprise.

This is not the first time such a plan has been advocated. The fact that the Mexican president now has taken hold of it is a promising development to those who believe the idea a practical and worthwhile one.

Cooperation among the nations of this hemisphere to foster peace and the economic welfare of the participants would be a development of world-wide importance. The movement is one deserving of the most serious study. That a workable plan can be agreed upon is a strong probability if recognized leaders in the different nations get behind it.

CHAPTER XXXIV

The worn front steps of the old Van Fleet house sagged under Mrs. Barstow's slight weight. The door bell jangled complainingly. After a long time there came the sound of shuffling steps, the door swung open grudgingly.

An old woman with a long yellow face, and a red checked shawl tied around her head and in a little knot under her chin, stared at her through the crack.

"You can wait in the parlor," she said when she understood it was a caller for the Misses Van Fleet.

How cold it was in the long, high-ceilinged room. How damp and musty! Mrs. Barstow fingered the carved mahogany davenport, with its faded red tapestry covering. Really very handsome. The heavy Persian rugs, soft as silk, glowing even in that darkened room, with the strong, vital colors of the East. But the stained wall paper, the mildew spots in the big engravings in their heavy gold frames . . . didn't they ever have a fire? And such a slatternly, crazy looking old servant!

Tick tock, tick tock, tick tock, the bronze clock on the white marble mantle ticked off the seconds sadly. Doors slammed shut, there came the sound of slippered feet dragging through the hallway. Then silence again.

Once she stood up to go. It was silly to wait so long in the cold, musty room. And still, to come all the way for nothing. . . .

Finally, the door opened, the old woman with the red shawl was back. "Miss Evvie is out," she said, "and Miss Babe is lying down."

"But I've come from San Francisco. Couldn't I—"

"You could come back," the old woman said, "some other time."

She stalked ahead into the hall, opened the big front door. "Good day, madam!" Lyla Barstow was being dismissed like a book agent. Bang! That was the door closing behind her.

The chill of the old house had struck into her very bones. She sat twenty minutes in front of the blazing fire at the Gray's just the other side of the hill, before she began to thaw out.

"And rude . . . Lottie, are they always so rude?"

Plump little Mrs. Gray laughed comfortably. "Always. Poor as church mice, and much too haughty to associate with any of us. So Curtis is interested in the girl . . . dear, dear. What's she like? I haven't seen her in years. Rather a beauty, isn't she?"

Mrs. Barstow nodded. "Yes, strikingly so. And I'm afraid Curtis is, well—serious. That's why I called—she has been so mysterious about them . . . what sort of girl was she, Lottie?"

"Oh, quiet little thing. Not like the girls nowadays. They never let her play with the other children. Of course, I know how you feel about Curtis . . . still, some of the flappers are terrible . . . simply terrible. Did you hear about the Hammond girl? The Leslie Hammond's Constance, you know. I had it from Carrie Pierson, you know what a gossip she is—so don't let it go any further, but . . ."

Mrs. Barstow listened, sipping her hot tea . . . the Hammond girl, who had been Curtis' partner at his first cotillion . . . what was the world coming to? At least, Joan was good . . . that was something . . .

Joan lay on the couch near the window, with a magazine propped up before her. She couldn't read. She wanted . . . what did she want? She didn't know. Impossible to be lonely with Maisie bustling back and forth every few minutes, but she was lonely . . . as lonely as Robinson Crusoe on his desert isle.

"Again!" Maisie scolded. "All that doorbell does is ring, ring, ring!"

"Why don't you let it ring and not answer it?" Joan grinned, stretching a long, slender foot in its yellow Chinese slipper.

"Well, I don't know . . . habit I guess," and she padded to the door, still grumbling.

"Oh!" It was Curtis, looking rather young and sheepish standing there in the doorway with his cheeks red from the wind, and a long florist's box under one arm. Such a big box, with a hole cut in one end, and long stems sticking out, like tails. Roses, of course. "Oh—I wasn't expecting to see you!"

"Can't I come in?" he asked, laughing, and stepping into the hall at the same time.

"Joan kind of wanted to be quiet today," she began doubtfully, but Curtis always over-awed her, and he was already pulling off his big coat.

"There's a man for you," Maisie exulted when he waived aside her feeble objections and sought Joan out for himself. "One in a million, an' I think she's getting to see it, if only she gets over her queer notions . . . I'll just go and get dinner for three . . . maybe he'll stay . . ."

"Why, Curtis Barstow! Didn't Maisie tell you to stay away from me and my cold!" But Joan held out both hands to him gladly, and her eyes, the color of the sea-green kimono, were flecked with happy light. "Curtis . . . I am glad you came . . . truly. And a box—what's in the box?"

With a little sob she went into his arms. "Curtis, don't ever let me go!"

"Open it and see." He smiled down at her gravely, not offering to help while her fingers struggled with the knots in the broad green tape. How lovely she was, with her ruffled golden hair, and the delicate ivory skin . . .

"La France roses! I haven't seen them since—oh, for so long—" She buried her face in their cool, wet fragrance. "Not since . . . I lived in the old house, with my aunts—"

"They were on some one's order. I made them give them to me. Old fashioned, aren't they? One doesn't see them often. So I lugged them up myself, to make sure of them!" He was touched by her delight in them . . . funny little girl, loving her flowers . . .

"They're like—like home," she said shakily. And the loneliness came back. Overwhelming loneliness, crushing her, frightening her. Old memories. Memories of the La France roses in the old garden across the bay. Of love and laughter, and another spring. Of promises that would never be fulfilled . . .

"Dear, you're crying!"

"No, I'm not!" She tried to laugh, but she couldn't. She saw it all. Clear as crystal. All the years to come. All the years of loneliness. Growing older and older, like Hogan in the shop. "Getting ahead," as Francine promised, getting ahead, and what for? What's the good of success when you're lonely, when you don't really belong to anyone, and no one belongs to you. Just growing hard and dry, without any hope, all the sweet, soft things denied . . .

And through the loneliness, through the forebodings that chilled her, through the sweet, heavy scent of the roses, she saw Curtis reaching out his arms to her.

With a little sob she went into them, hid her face against the rough wool of his sleeve. This was peace . . . this was rest . . . everything she needed . . . "Curtis, don't ever let me go!"

"My dear, of course I won't . . . Joan, you've never kissed me . . . will you?"

She gave him her lips, crying still.

"Johnnie, don't cry! It's nothing to cry about . . . because you love me, is it? Is it so bad as that? Didn't you want to love me, Joan?"

She was quivering in his arms, quivering as if she were afraid. "Johnnie, stop being foolish and smile at me . . . look up . . . tell me you do love me, Johnnie . . . You do, girl,—don't you?"

No putting it off any longer, no running away from it, she had to face it now.

"Don't you love me?" he was asking. "Don't you?"

And how could she tell? What answer was there to give him? Once she had thought she knew what love was. Once she had snatched it eagerly, in the pride and arrogance of youth. And the great flame of it had seared her heart, burnt it out, so that it could never take fire like that again . . . and maybe it wasn't real love after all, it couldn't have been . . . for real love lasts forever, and it didn't last . . . he went away, and forgot her . . .

And here was Curtis, good, loyal Curtis, loving her, and she loving him . . . or did she?

"How does anyone know?" she whispered. "How do you tell? I don't know—I don't know really!"

But she clung to him, pressed her wet face against his hot cheek, wouldn't let him go. "Joan, it means so much . . . answer me, dear, tell me the truth." She wouldn't answer, and he only knew that he loved her, and she was beautiful. She lay limp and relaxed in his arms, letting him kiss her again and again, her red lips parted, her wet eyes closed . . . "Don't ever let me go, Curtis, don't ever forget me . . . ever . . . promise me you won't . . ."

She kissed him then, and where she kissed him his face was wet, so that he knew she was crying still, crying, when he was telling her, trying to tell her of his love . . .

"Forget you, Joan? Don't you understand? I love you. I'm asking you to marry me, I'm not going away—"

"No, no—not that—not marriage, Curtis. Not now. Please, not now," she cried unreasonably, looking at him with haunted, swimming eyes. "I don't want to be married, not for a long time anyway. Please don't ask me. You won't ask me, will you? Please don't, Curtis—"

Rapid Change of Sex

The oyster possibly holds the record for a rapid change of sex. The "native," for instance, may turn from male to female and back again as many as four times within thirteen months. The Portuguese and American oysters, strangely enough, know no such change, remaining male or female throughout life.

The Driftless Area

The driftless area in the United States includes several hundred square miles in Wisconsin and adjacent portions of Minnesota, Iowa and Illinois. It has never itself undergone glacial action of any kind. Just why this area should have escaped the glacial action that went on all around it is by no means clear and has never been absolutely explained.

Walk Your Way to Good Health and Well-Being

It Is the Ideal Exercise for All Ages, Says Dr. Copeland, Urging It as a Daily Habit

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

THE OTHER DAY I was amused by the sight of several adults roller-skating in a city park. Skating is a beneficial exercise, but everyone will agree that until one becomes expert there are many hazards connected with this form of recreation. Yet, it is gratifying to learn that this healthful exercise is again popular, particularly in the outdoor form.

I hope that interest in walking will now be revived. Many of you recall the days when walking was a popular sport in this country. Walking clubs and hiking parties were popular outdoor sports, indulged in by the young and old. Unfortunately, the interest in this health promoting exercise has greatly dwindled during the past few decades.

The value of walking as an exercise cannot be overstated. It is especially beneficial for those who require a certain amount of exercise and cannot indulge in strenuous performances, which to them are dangerous. Fortunately, walking is a form of exercise that is within the reach of everyone. It requires no equipment other than a good pair of shoes and the determination to walk.

A Good Exercise

Many constitutional ailments can be traced to the lack of exercise. Poor complexion, lack of appetite, indigestion, inability to sleep, constipation, headache, and irritability—these are a few signs of ill health that rapidly disappear when moderate exercise is taken. There is no better way to get it than in the form of walking.

Unfortunately, the increased popularity of automobiles has eliminated the need of walking. Going without it has influenced the health of the nation as a whole. I believe in the automobile, but let us not forget we have feet.

It is a mistake to neglect and overlook the value of walking. My advice is to walk whenever possible. In this way you will improve your health and protect against those ailments that result from lack of exercise.

When you walk keep the body erect, the head up and the abdomen in. The chest should be high and the shoulders thrown back. Relax, and swing your arms freely from the shoulders as you walk. The toes should be pointed straight forward as you walk on the balls of your feet.

Don't Overdo

Probably you have not been accustomed to walking. In that case it is advisable that you begin with gradual amounts of this valuable exercise. Increase the length of your walks slowly and do not indulge in them to the point of fatigue.

There are those who avoid walking because they complain of pain in their feet. This is often due to some foot disability that requires medical attention. It is foolish to neglect the feet. Go to one who is expert in their care. You will bless me for this suggestion if you act upon it.

MOVIES

AT THE GRAND

The Grand Theatre offers you at least one mystery picture, this season, for which the management defies you to offer a solution.

It is Universal's horror-girded, thrill-laden film, "Secret of the Blue Room," which begins its engagement today.

At the climax, after the desperate death struggle between the last of the appointed victims and the killer, a battle in which the murderer is apprehended, you should have to be a veritable Sherlock Holmes to have identified the killer before he is unmasked.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Sylvia Sidney is starred in the film version of Theodore Dreiser's "Jennie Gerhardt," which comes to the Cliftona Theatre tomorrow, and Wednesday. She plays the title, with Donald Cook, Mary Astor, H. B. Warner and Edward Arnold heading the supporting cast. Marion Gering directed the film, a B. P. Schulberg production for Paramount.

"Jennie Gerhardt" is the story of a woman who, as the result of her beauty and attraction for men, is caught by forces far too strong for her to battle. But she is, at the same time, ready to sacrifice everything for the man she loves.

Her first contact with life comes when an elderly Senator, deeply impressed by her naivete and charm, pays court to her. When he saves her brother from an impending jail sentence, she tries to repay his kindness. The Senator promises marriage on his return from a trip to Washington. But he is killed in a railroad wreck. Their child is born.

Jennie gets work as personal maid to a wealthy woman, and the latter's brother is attracted to her. This time Jennie knows real love and their next few years are blissfully happy. But when he discovers that she has a child, his whole attitude undergoes a change. In the events that follow, Jennie is helpless. The picture reaches a poignant climax in her attempts to right herself.

—o—

Anyway, this will go down in history as the world's gosh-awfullest hang-over.

The ash can is yawning for the straw hat.

been as potent as an after-election peanut-pusher.

The Roosevelts are a loyal clan and F. D. R. has backed up his son. The only trouble is Young Jimmy is sometimes not too wise in his political selections. Two, particularly, have come under fire.

One is John E. Donahue, a 30-year-old drug store clerk in Haverhill, Mass., named receiver of the closed Essex National Bank. The other is George C. Sweeney, named assistant attorney general in the Department of Justice.

Both appointments caused gasps of amazement. Sweeney about 35 years old, was mayor of Gardner, Mass. He had about eight years of legal experience, but much more important, was a "Before Chicago Roosevelt Rooter." One day Young Jimmy asked him: "How would you like to be an assistant attorney general?"

Jimmy apparently had the job of "assistant attorney general" confused with that of "special assistant." There are about 60 of the latter and only six of the former.

Anyway Sweeney came to Washington. Senator Walsh opposed the appointment but Attorney General Cummings got orders direct from the White House to give him the job. There was only one assistant attorney generalship left, and Sweeney got it. It happened to be the most important in the Department of Justice—in charge of "Lands."

At first he was the laughing stock of the Department. He forgot to get sworn into office, thereby missing $100 of his first month's pay. He was shy and reticent. But the funny thing is that he has now learned the ropes and turned out to be a pretty good executive—a lot better than some of his colleagues.

Perhaps Jimmy Roosevelt's other appointees will turn out the same way.

Jimmy has a lot to learn yet, but he isn't going to back down in Massachusetts. His motto is the reply of William Pitt to Horace Walpole: "It is no crime, sir, to be young."

World Jurists in Reichstag Arson Trial

EX PREMIER NITTI REICHSTAG BUILDING AFTER FIRE ERNST TORGLER

Denied official recognition by German authorities, the international committee of world-famous lawyers, including Arthur Garfield Hays, of the United States, ex-Premier Nitti, of Italy, Dr. Branting, of Sweden, as well as Dutch, French, British and Swiss jurists, will hold its own independent inquiry in London into the case surrounding the burning of the Reichstag Building in Berlin last February. Ernest Torgler, former Communist leader in the Reichstag, a Dutchman, Marius Van Der Lubbe, and three others are accused of the crime and are scheduled to go on trial at Leipzig. But anti-Hitlerites charge the whole business, fire and plot, was framed by Nazis as a propaganda feature and with the object of eliminating Torgler from German politics.

OHIO TO ASK PUBLIC OPINION IN DISTRIBUTION OF LIQUOR

COLUMBUS, Sept. 18.—Public opinion will be sought by the special liquor committee of the Ohio senate in studying methods of handling the distribution of intoxicating beverages when and if the 18th amendment is repealed.

Views of the public will be considered, according to the plans of committee members, in attempting to formulate an ideal system of liquor control for the state of Ohio.

As a part of the plan to tap public sentiment, the committee has arranged to conduct a series of hearings throughout the state, beginning at Dayton soon and carried in succession into other principal Ohio cities including Cincinnati, Cleveland, Akron, Toledo and Youngstown.

A questionnaire also has been prepared, seeking the views of newspaper editors throughout the state on the problem.

Particularly, it is understood, the committee will seek the attitude of the public upon a proposal to distribute liquor through a semi-public corporation.

PLAN INTRICATE

The corporation, which would be established with capital stock open to public subscription, would have the exclusive right to the sale of intoxicating beverages through local branches. The local branches, according to the plan, would sell the liquor in original packages for consumption off the premises.

Operation of the corporation would be under strict state control, and earnings of the concern, it is understood, would be limited, probably to six per cent.

The plan is believed to be the outgrowth of a recent study by the senate committee of the Canadian system of liquor control, and is designed particularly, it is said, to block the springing up of saloons.

Proponents of the plan point out also that the semi-public aspect of the corporation would take care of objections that have been expressed in some quarters to the state entering the liquor business.

An idea of the line along which the senate liquor committee is working may be obtained from the questions listed in the questionnaire being mailed to newspaper editors.

Some of the questions are as follows:

What plan of distribution of liquor and its control do you suggest?

Would you limit sales to government stores or dispensaries?

Would you allow hotels, restaurants and clubs to serve drinks with meals?

What, if any, regulations do you favor?

What do you consider the chief dangers in liquor distribution?

Do you favor the open sale of intoxicants at retail?

According to Senator Joseph Ackerman of Cleveland, a member of the senate liquor committee, one of the questionnaires will be sent to officials of the Anti-Saloon league.

Will Rogers Picks A Story For This Spot

By WILL ROGERS

IT's about time to get the absent-minded professor into this again. He's had quite a rest. All on account of the football season, when the world knows that professors ain't so absent-minded, and even if they are, that ain't an excuse for the way they act.

But this professor that I heard about woke up in the night and found the alarm clock had stopped. His watch had stopped too, because he'd forgotten to wind it. He had to know what time it was, because he had to get up early in the morning to take a train to another football game.

So he went out in the yard and consulted the sun dial with his flashlight.

Ross-Co Society Plans Loan Exhibit At Elks' Hall Opening October 24

It is announced by the Ross-co Historical Society that a Loan Exhibit will be held at Elks' Hall, Chillicothe, beginning on October 24th and lasting through October 27th. The hall will be open from 3 to 5 p. m. and 7 to 10 p. m.

Ross-co and Chillicothe are rich in relics, curios and mementoes of the past century and a third, not only in reference to those localities, but of State-wide interest.

On previous occasions, particularly when the Centennials of Chillicothe and Ohio were celebrated, a vast number of articles, including manuscripts, antique furniture, household belongings and wearing apparel of the early settlers were displayed. The Historical Society has received as a bequest from the late M. Petrea McClintock and Anna P. McClintock Strong their home in Chillicothe, to be used as a Museum, as a memorial to their parents. This house will not be formally given to the Scciety until July 1934. In order to make known some of the valuable private collections of the county to the public, this present exhibit which is more extensive than any former one, has been organized. The material will come not only from the city but also from the countryside where many of the pioneers resided and where their descendants now live.

Each evening there will be a different program, including a costume parade, an historic playlet, musical entertainment, and a pageant. On one evening, Gov. White as speaker, will be the honored guest. Invitations have been issued to nearby cities and towns to attend this exhibit.

Other Historical Societies and similar groups in other Counties are arranging to make a pilgrimage to Chillicothe, the first capital of the State of Ohio, during the week of the Loan Exhibit.

The dramatic scene was said to have been a repitition of one which took place in Memorial Hall here in November of 1913, launching the campaign which resulted in the 18th amendment.

Prior to the pledge to carry on the fight for prohibition, Dr. Norman V. Peale, a native Ohioan who is now pastor of the Marble Collegiate Church of New York, urged the audience to "let the wets work out their own plan of liquor control" when and if prohibition is repealed.

"It's their baby; let them raise it," Dr. Peale declared.

The conference here was scheduled to be brought to a close today with the reading of pastoral assignments. Some difficulty encountered in placing the pastors, however, may delay adjournment until tomorrow.

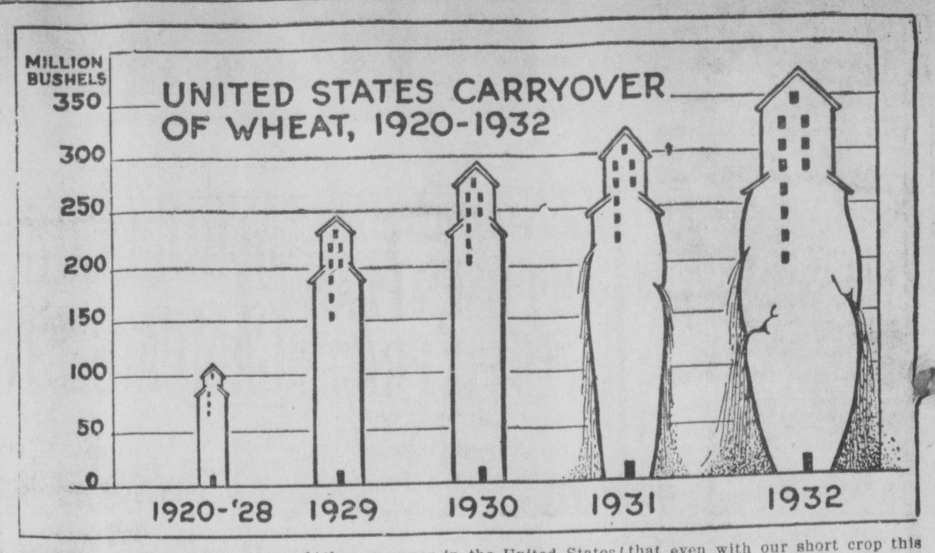
Europe's Tariff Walls

When Russia and Austria-Hungary were divided into nation states tariff walls set up by them ran through farms, in several instances, and the owners had to pay an import duty on milk that was carried from the pasture to the barn.—Collier's Weekly.



BURSTING wheat bins pictured above indicate how the carryover of wheat in the United States has increased since 1928. From 1920 to 1928 the carryover was about normal and a bin or grain elevator capacity of slightly more than 100 million bushels was sufficient for supplies from year to year. Since 1928 the carryover in the United States has increased rapidly. In 1929 it was nearly 250 million bushels, in 1930 it was nearly 300 million bushels, it was over 300 million bushels in 1931 and in 1932 it reached a new peak of more than 360 million bushels. Secretary Wallace has estimated that even with our short crop this year, the carryover will still be above normal a year from now because of the present large carryover, the lack of export demand and reduced feeding and, unless something is done to check it, the carryover is likely to jump again to around 350 million bushels in 1935.

Government, Private Jobs in Conflict In Brand Case

WASHINGTON — Charley Brand, one of the powers in the Agricultural Adjustment Association, is a genial soul, but he has a remarkable fondness for storing up trouble for himself.

His latest faux pas, in any other Administration, would have been enough to bring a resignation.

During the summer, Charley sent out letters to members of the National Fertilizer Association inviting them to attend the annual convention at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. Among the attractions offered to induce attendance was a list of speakers on which was the name of "Charles Brand—Co-Administrator of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration."

That was all right. No one objects to any government official making speeches.

But the letter was signed: "Charles Brand, Executive Secretary of the National Fertilizer Association."

Now it is a fixed rule that no official can hold a private job unless it is clearly shown it does not conflict with the government job. It is Charley Brand's job as Co-Administrator of the A. A. A. to fight for the interests of the farmer, to tax the processors in behalf of the farmer. But as Secretary of the National Fertilizer Association, it is Charley Brand's job to sell fertilizer to the farmers.

The situation has become one of the most talked of incidents of the Agricultural Department.

Stamps and Politics

One member of the present Administration owes his job to the Roosevelt passion for postage stamps.

Alvin W. Hall has been retained as Director of the Bureau of Printing and Engraving despite the fact that he is a hangover of the old Reed Smoot dynasty—and all because of postage stamps.

Hall has been a frequent visitor at the White House with rare and unusual stamps. He takes them to Little Louey Howe, also an ardent philatelist, who takes many of them into the President.

Hall organized one of the most unusual stamp collections in the country to represent his Bureau at the Century of Progress. He collected all the stamps ever issued by the United States and is now working on an even better collection, both of which eventually will be given to F. D. R.

The collection will include an example of every commemorative stamp ever issued by the United States since 1898—the year commemorative stamps were first issued. It will be one of the finest collections in the world.

Young Jimmy Roosevelt

Trouble is increasing over the efforts of Young Jimmy Roosevelt to dominate Democracy in Massachusetts.

A terrific feud is on between Jimmy on one side, with Governor Joseph B. Ely and Senator David Ignatius Walsh on the other. They claim that Jimmy has set himself up as "Crown Prince of Massachusetts," that he plans to run for Governor.

Both sides are making themselves look rather silly.

Governor Ely began it first. Before the Chicago convention he had fought desperately for his friend, Al Smith. But walking down an aisle of the convention hall after his father's triumphant victory, Jimmy Roosevelt saw Ely, stuck out his hand, wanted to shake hands.

Ely put his hand behind his back.

Since then Jimmy has shown sardonic glee in robbing Ely and Walsh of almost every scrap of patronage. Politically they have

Mrs. Mary G. Beck Sustains Painful Injuries Saturday Night

COMPANION HURT

Driver of Other Automobile Put in Jail

Mrs. Mary G. Beck, Northridge-rd, received severe cuts on the forehead, nose and lower face, and Andrew J. Casselle, N. Scioto-st, plant superintendent of the Container Corporation of America, suffered a cut on the chin and chest bruises, when the DeSoto coupe in which they were riding, driven by Mr. Casselle, was sideswiped by a Chevrolet sedan driven by Russell Barlow, 2025 11th-st, Huntington, W. Va., on the Scioto trail, one half mile south of Circleville, at 9 p. m. Saturday.

Mr. Barlow was arrested immediately after the accident by Sheriff Charles Radcliff for investigation and held in the county jail until 4 p. m. Sunday when he was released after making arrangements to pay damages.

OCCURS ON HILL

The mishap occured on the hill in front of the Jacob Dumm farm. Mr. Casselle and Mrs. Beck were enroute to Chillicothe and Barlow, accompanied by his wife and mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary Hendrick of Cox's Landing, W. Va., was going to Columbus to visit the latter's sister. The Barlow car suddenly sideswiped Mr. Casselle's auto, both cars bounding to opposite sides of the road. Mrs. Beck was thrown against the windshield breaking the glass, and her knees struck the dash-board inflicting cuts. Mr. Casselle was forced against the steering wheel sustaining a bruised chest and also suffering a cut on the chin from flying glass.

Mrs. Barlow and Mrs. Hendrick were thrown from the Chevrolet as it struck a fence on the west side of the road, but escaped injury. Mr. Barlow, too, was uninjured.

A passing motorist brought Mr. Casselle and Mrs. Beck to this city where their injuries were treated by Dr. H. D. Jackson. Sheriff Radcliff returned the occupants of the other car to Circleville placing Mr. Barlow in jail. The latter's wife and Mrs. Hendrick were quartered at the Hotel Boggs.

Mr. Casselle's DeSoto coupe was towed to the E. E. Clifton garage for repairs. The left front wheel was torn off and the front of the car was badly damaged. The left running board and left front wheel were torn from Barlow's Chevrolet car.

WILL TO HELP REVISE NATION BANKING LAWS

Local Banker Drafted By F. M. Law, President of Association.

WORK IS IMPORTANT

Committee To Work With Next Congress.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 18.—Clark Will, of the Third National Bank, at Circleville, today was listed here as officially chosen by the American Bankers Association to take part in the important deliverations by which bankers hope to aid in shaping changes in the banking laws at the coming session of congress.

F. M. Law, new president of the association, made the selection of leaders to work on the many problems in their relation to legislation soon to be studied by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee.

With R. F. C. entering into so many fields of financing for recovery and with the deposit insurance law to go into effect January 1, bankers will find much of their time taken up with study of legislative and administrative steps here in the coming months.

Law therefore picked a few men to be his associates, naming the a after the Chicago convention, and thus the Circleville banker, who is president of the Ohio Bankers Association, was honored.

Dr. Emmanuel Poppen, of Columbus, is president of the synod and Dr. Troutman is a member of the mission board.

The last time the Ohio synod met here was in 1922.

With the U. B. conference also scheduled for September, Circleville during that month in 1934 will become a real church city.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 18. — The hands of Ohio Methodism today were raised in pledge to a new crusade for prohibition.

Despite preponderant odds with the states of the nation lining up one after the other for repeal of the 18th amendment, 3,500 persons attending the temperance anniversary rally of the Ohio conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church here last night, stood in unison at the call of Dr. Howard H. Russell, white-haired veteran prohibition leader of Westerville, and repeated the vow:

PRESIDENT ILL

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—President Roosevelt was confined to his bedroom today with a mild cold accompanied by a slight temperature.

The president's illness was not at all serious but Lt. Comdr. Ross McIntyre, naval physician, advised him not to exert himself and to stay away from his office today.

All appointments with the president were cancelled except those of Secretary of the Treasury Woodin and Secretary of Commerce Roper. Woodin called on the president shortly before 10 o'clock and remained about an hour. Roper was to call later in the day.

Rail Detective, Who Acted Here, Critically Wounded

James E. Towne, a Baltimore and Ohio railroad detective, of Columbus, who last Monday escaped brutal treatment at the hands of three negroes whom he ordered off a southbound Chesapeake and Ohio railroad freight train, south of Circleville, is in a serious condition at Mt. Carmel hospital, Columbus with a bullet wound near his heart which he received in a similar circumstance near Grove City Sunday.

Two negroes, Elias Bell, 26, and Roosevelt Clayton, 36, both of Birmingham, Ala., were arrested several hours after the shooting and are being held in Franklin-co jail for questioning. Both deny any complicity in the shooting.

According to Franklin-co sheriff's deputies, as the freight train enroute from Pittsburg to Cincinnatti passed near Urbancrest, negro settlement between Columbus and Grove City, Towne approached several train riders and ordered them off the train. They struggled with him, took his weapon and shot him, then jumped from the train and ran toward Columbus. A motorist took the wounded man to Mt. Carmel hospital.

The incident closely parallels Towne's experience here last week. Monday afternoon he ordered three negroes from a C. and O. southbound train, south of this city. They refused and when Towne started to enforce his order they jumped on him and attempted to grab his gun. Several workmen came along and two of the negroes ran away, while the third, Henry Brown, was held by Towne and brought to this city where the latter placed a charge of resisting an officer against him. Brown was fined $25 and costs and sentenced to serve five days in the city prison by Mayor Hedges.

Brown was released Friday after serving the five days. The fine was suspended.

JOHNSON ATTENTION NOW ON RETAILERS

Master Code, to Also Include Construction, is Being Studied

PRICES IN QUESTION

Ford Problem Now Near Administration

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—Master codes for retailers and the construction industry, involving upwards of 16,000,000 employes today became the goal of Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, as the bituminous coal code went to the White House.

Although the retail and construction codes have been seized by the bitter fight over coal, recovery officials hold them even more important because they extend into every nook and corner of the nation.

A master code for retailers, worked out by Deputy Administrator A. D. Whiteside, now is on Johnson's desk, with a code embracing more than a score of branches of the construction industry about ready for action.

"PRICE-FIXING"

In the retail code Johnson faced a decision on the major question of price-fixing—a question which may have to be answered finally by President Roosevelt.

Although Johnson has approved price control features in both the coal and oil codes, he refuses to label them price-fixing. He has indicated he would approve a provision in a retail code forbidding selling below wholesale cost, plus ten per cent.

Price-fixing already has been attacked by the consumers advisory board of which Mrs. Mary Rumsey is chairman. The exact form of retail price control also is the subject of a battle between leading retail interests.

Many other problems vital to the NRA also claimed Johnson's attention as he emerged from the coal code battle.

He plans to swing into the job of reorganizing the entire NRA staff, which has grown to embrace 1,000 workers. The period of transition from negotiation of codes to the job of enforcing and administering them has arrived, according to Johnson.

PLAN LOCAL BOARDS

By setting up local compliance boards Johnson has paved the way for enforcement, by persuasion chiefly, of the temporary Blue Eagle agreements with the President He also must be prepared to enforce provisions of the permanent codes.

The problem of Henry Ford, the auto manufacturer, thus was brought closer to the recovery administration. An investigation to determine if Ford is complying with the automobile code is expected to be made within the next two weeks.

Local compliance boards were

2 STATES VOTE

New Mexico and Idaho Expected To Join March For Repeal.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Sept. 18.—New Mexico was prepared to go to the polls tomorrow and express a decided preference for repeal of the Eighteenth amendment.

The vote generally anticipated will give repeal a majority of about two to one, although some repealists predict a three-to-one majority. Gov. Arthur Seligman expressed the opinion that every county in the state would favor repeal.

New Mexico went dry by a two to one majority in 1917.

BOISE, Idaho, Sept. 18.—With a rift imminent in the ranks of the churches and with the din of last minute pulpit exhortations fresh in their ears, Idaho voters prepared to go to the polls tomorrow on the national repeal issue.

Conservative wets predicted a 3 to 2 majority and estimates ranged as high as 2 to 1.

Jean Harlow Weds Film Photographer In 'Plane Elopement This Morning

JEAN HARLOW

Platinum Blonde, 22, and Howard Rosson, 38, Married At Yuma.

COMES AS SURPRISE

Is Third Venture For Vivacious Actress.

YUMA, Ariz., Sept. 18.—Jean Harlow, 22, platinum blonde film star, was married here at 4:30 o'clock this morning to Harold G. Rosson, 38, Hollywood photographer, as the climax to a romantic airplane elopement from Hollywood.

They arrived shortly before 4 o'clock, obtaining a license, and were married by E. A. Freesom, Yuma's "marrying justice of the peace."

When the couple applied for the license Miss Harlow gave her name as Harlene Carpenter Bern.

She was the widow of Paul Bern, who was a Hollywood film executive.

THIRD MARRIAGE

It was Miss Harlow's third marriage and her second romantic elopement. When 16 years of age she eloped with Charles F. McGrew, II., wealthy young Chicago broker. They were divorced Jan. 29. 1931.

On July 2, 1931 she married Bern. Their romance came as a surprise to even close friends. There was no elopement, however, a quiet home wedding being attended by a number of the close screen colony friends of the couple at the home of her parents in Hollywood. Their romance was revealed when they applied for a marriage license in Los Angles.

On Sept. 10 of the same year Bern was found dead in his home, a coroner's jury later finding that he had committed suicide.

After a wedding breakfast in a nearby deserted little desert cafe Rosson and his beautiful young bride departed for Los Angeles.

FUNERAL TUESDAY

Despondency Over Finances Named As Cause.

Edward Shaffer, 43, employed as a farmer at the Pickaway-co infirmary for a number of years, committed suicide Sunday night by drinking strychnine. The suicide verdict was returned by Coroner C. E. Bowers after he investigated the death.

Mr. Shaffer was reported in financial difficulties.

He was last seen alive shortly before sundown Sunday by Henry Euhring, an employe at the home, who saw him walk past the disposal plant and drop to the ground. Euhring thought nothing of the act until he was notified Monday morning that Shaffer was missing.

FOUND BY SISTER

Mr. Shaffer's body was found by his sister, Mrs. Clinton Stout, who was walking from her home across a field to the infirmary where she is employed as a general helper. She saw the body lying on the ground near the path but not recognizing it went on to the house where she was informed Mr. Shaffer was missing.

Mrs. Stout with Sam Thomas and H. E. Mowery, home superintendent, returned to the place and found the body. A small portion of strychnine remained in the bottle.

Mr. Shaffer was lying on his face when the searchers found

Storm Damages N. England Coast

Highways, Railroads Washed Out With Single Life Reported Lost.

BOSTON, Sept. 18. Deluged by the heaviest downpour in half a century, new England began to repair washed out bridges, highways and railroad tracks, refloat sunken and beached small craft, pump out flooded cellars and resume disrupted air and ocean traffic.

One life was lost in the storm. James Mulholland of Bradley, Me., was swept to his death in the river at Orono during a gallant attempt to rescue Doris Sherman. Miss Sherman was rescued.

Two Nantucket fishing boats with four men each aboard were the Massa, and the Anna C. Perry. They were being sought by coastguard craft.

Many thousands of dollars damage was left in the wake of the 48 hour rain storm, the tail end of the tropical hurricane which swept out to sea before lashing New England with the brunt of its fury.

Robert "Lefty" McLarren, Walnut-st, changed his former plea of "not guilty" to "guilty" on a charge of burglarizing the home of Mrs. Virgie Hall, Chillicothe, formerly of Walnut-st, July 6, and stealing a seven tube Apex radio, and was sentenced to the Ohio penitentiary for not less than five or more than 30 years. Sterling Lamb was his attorney. He was taken to the Ohio penitentiary Monday afternoon.

John Cain, Williamsport, convicted of breaking and entering the granary of Elmer Ater, near Williamsport, and stealing 15 bushels of wheat, and Robert Reynolds, Yellowbud, charged with forging and uttering a bad check, were placed on parole for two years following their guilty pleas.

Cullop hit a home run with two mates on in the inning in which Jess Petty was driven off the hill. Walter Tauscher finished the game and received credit for the victory.

3 MATCHES PLAYED IN TITLE TOURNEY

Several matches, all of which were interesting, were played in the Pickaway Country club championship tournament Sunday.

Frank Casey, local pro, urges that all matches be played as soon as possible.

John Bragg eliminated James Walker in a splendid match by a 1 up margin; Freeman Jones shot an 85 on Charles Gilmore to win his match by a three and one edge and K. J. Herrman eliminated Claude Kraft 1 up taking the verdict on the eighteenth hole.

Good golf featured all three matches.

His attentions unwelcome, Hartle tried strong-arm methods with the foregoing result.

NEW CHAMPION

Dunlap Wins U. S. Amateur

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—The score board said that he had lost the Amateur golf championship of the United States to George Dunlap, Jr., by six up and five to play but to Max Marston the margin of defeat was represented by eight inches. In effect, that's about what he said yesterday, anyhow, as he rode back from the scene of his tragic defeat at Cincinnati in the final round of the championship on Saturday.

"Did you know that eight putts stopped an inch from the cup during the morning round?" he said.

As a matter of fact, I did. But their significance was lost during the general furore brought on and created by Dunlap's record-equalling 68. When a thing like that is going on, one recognizes positive and not negative results. One is impressed only with the fact that Dunlap had four birdies and thirteen pars; that not once was he off the fairway, that he wasn't in a trap until late in the afternoon.

Yet though this was perfection, it might have been bettered. Eight inches more, taken one at a time, and this needn't have been mockery in the name of competition. It could have been a golf match.

New York Can Clinch Title

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.-Manager Bill Terry of the New York Giants, who first saw the light of day 34 years ago in Atlanta, Ga., and probably at the time never gave the thing a thought, today reached out to grab a piece of bunting and a bit of fame.

Terry's Giants can win the National league pennant race today.

If they win from St. Louis and Pittsburgh drops one to Philadelphia this afternoon, the long grind will be over. Chicago's Cubs passed out of the picture Sunday.

Two victories for the New Yorkers and three more for the Washington Senators will make the two clubs mathematically certain of facing each other in the world's series next month. Washington has ten more games to play and the Giants eleven.

Lusitania Hoard Lures Undersea Explorers

S. S. LUSITANIA — EXPLORER'S MECHANICAL ARM.

Using his 22-foot submarine, Explorer, Simon Lake, famous inventor of undersea craft, of Bridgeport, Conn., hopes to succeed in a forthcoming attempt to reach the wreck of the liner Lusitania, in her ocean grave off the Irish Coast, where she was torpedoed in 1916. The diminutive submarine attained a depth of 300 feet in initial tests in Long Island Sound, and as the sunken liner lies in only 200 feet of water, it is reasonable to concede the Lake expedition an excellent chance of succeeding in the venture. The strong room of the liner is said to contain about $4,000,000 in gold and silver, as well as a large quantity of precious stones and other jewelry.

Defamatory Words

Defamatory words are those which injure the reputation of another. If written and published they constitute libel; if spoken, slander. Libel is usually regarded more seriously than slander because the written word suggests premeditation, and has more permanence than a slander, which is often uttered in the heat of the moment.

lease of Bailey by force were expected to be taken by the authorities. Sinister rumors have been current.

The twelve defendants include two of the most notorious "Bad Men" in the west. One of this pair is Bailey, the other Albert L. Bates, an ex-convict and jail breaker.

Bailey was a leader of one of the most dangerous criminal gangs in the country. He was trapped on August 14 as he slept on a cot, surrounded by a small arsenal of weapons, on a farm near Paradise, Texas. Not only is he accused of being the "master mind" of the Urschel kidnaping, but the authorities lay at his door the machine gun slaying of five men at the Kansas City union station.

Bates was arrested in Denver by department of justice officials who identified him as George Bates, a suspect in the Urschel kidnaping. He escaped from the Van Buren county jail in Paw Paw, Michigan, on Christmas day, 1931. He has a long criminal record.

The other ten defendants were taken into custody at Paradise, Texas, St. Paul and Minneapolis. One of them is Mrs. Ora L. Shannon whose husband owned the farm near Paradise where Bailey was captured.

It was at the Shannon farm that Urschel allegedly was held captive from July 23 to July 31. His fingerprints were said to have been found there after the government staged a spectacular airplane and automobile raid and captured Bailey.

$200,000 PAID

Urschel was taken from his palatial home in Oklahoma City on the night of July 22. It is charged that he was spirited by automobile to the Shannon ranch and kept hidden there for nine days. After his release on the reported payment of $200,000 in cash he furnished clews which led to the arrest of Bailey at Paradise and Bates in Denver.

Shannon, owner of the farm near Paradise, Mrs. Shannon and their 21-year-old son, Armon Shannon, were also arrested and all three are among the defendants.

Martin is Facing Many Obstacles As Week Starts

HAVANA, Sept. 18.—Surviving wild rumors of revolts that failed to materialize and threatened general strikes, President Ramon Grau San Martin's government today entered its third week in power over the destiny of Cuba.

The greatest obstacles facing the administration appeared to be those which have confronted it since birth — the controversy with the ousted army officers at the National hotel and a threat of the association of commercial owners to close their stores tomorrow in protest against present economic conditions.

These owners conferred with Grau San Martin, but did not discuss a possible strike and listened only to his plans for conducting the government, reviving business and restoring the republic to normal conditions.

STAYING AT HOME

The owners were reported privately to be fearful of widening labor demands for higher wages. They complained that business is stagnant because the people are staying at home.

Contrarily, however, the greatest crowds in the recent history of Havana thronged the plaza of the Malecon and Prado last night. Hordes of children played in the parks and streets and along the sea wall.

This correspondent personally saw between 50,000 and 100,000 adults and 3,000 children happily parading about the city. The oldest residents of Havana expressed astonishment at their numbers and their carefree attitude.

This was generally taken as indicating public satisfaction with the government, despite political and commercial opposition.

The island was reported tranquil by the army following yesterday's clash in Managua, where Major Jose Del Gado, former chief of the national police, was arrested by the army.

His arrest required a brief battle and an exchange of shots. He was wanted for alleged crimes under the Machado regime. Dr. Alejandro Vergara, an innocent bystander, was wounded in the affray. Four others were also arrested.

Otherwise, there were no uprisings reported. Col. Fulgencio Batista disparaged threats of the store owners that they would close their shops, but it was apparent the army was ready to use its soldiers to open and operate food stores if necessary.

Batista said the entire island was more peaceful than it had been in years, with quiet prevailing in every province.

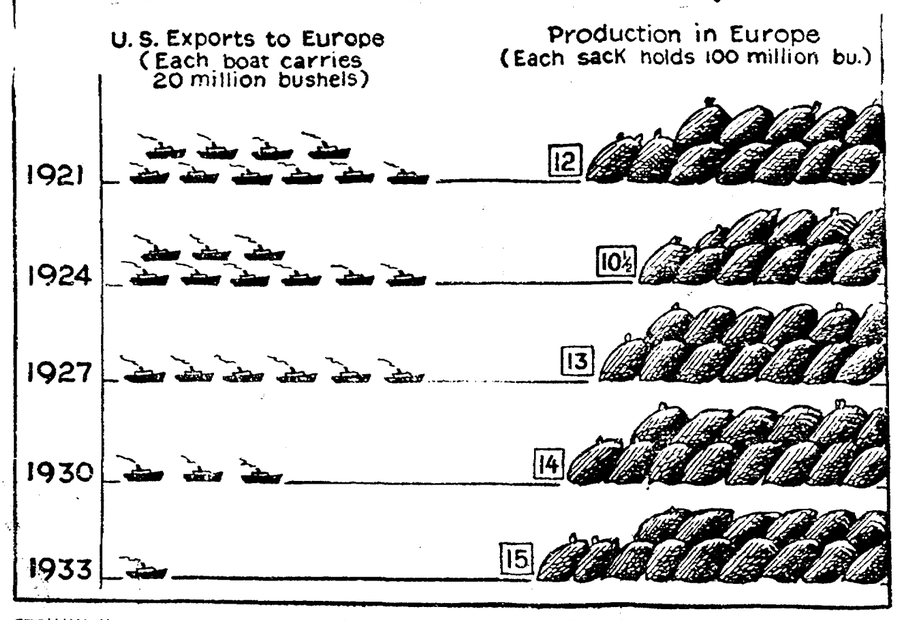
Wheat: U. S. Exports to Europe and Production in Europe



WHEN Europe produces more wheat for herself she buys less from the United States. That is the feature of the world wheat problem that this chart shows. For instance, in 1921, when many wheat ships were busy carrying the bread grain to Europe, that continent produced only 1,200,000,000 bushels. Since 1927, European countries have been producing more and more of their own wheat and the wheat traffic across the Atlantic has slowed up. In fact, efforts of European countries to supply their needs, and their buying wheat from other countries has just about cut off our wheat exports, as the lone boat for 1933 represented in the chart indicates. The United States doesn't want to withdraw from the export trade, but rather than have grain pile up in the United States or be sold at less than cost, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration has begun a wheat plan which will reduce acreage in the United States and bring production down to the point where it can all be marketed at a profit to the farmer.

Lamson Desires Hanging Over Life Term in Jail

SAN JOSE, Cal., Sept. 18. —A special "suicide guard" of deputy sheriffs today was established over David A. Lamson.

Sheriff William J. Emig made the drastic move following a report from Lamson's cellmate that the handsome Stanford university press executive, facing death on the gallows for the murder of his wife, was suffering from "fits of deep despondency."

"We'll take no chances with this prisoner now," the sheriff said. "We want to deliver him safely to San Quentin prison."

A relay of deputies then was counted off to watch Lamson "closely night and day."

However, there were no indications from the prisoner himself that he contemplated self destruction.

He smiled slightly, he had "slept well," and then reiterated his astounding declaration that he would " a thousand times rather hang than go to prison for life."

The death sentence is scheduled to be pronounced upon him tomorrow by Superior Judge Roberg R. Syer in accordance with the verdict brought in Saturday night.

A jury of seven men and five women, after eight hours of deliberating the evidence presented in a four-weeks trial, returned a verdict of "guilty of murder in the first degree."

Because they did not impose a life sentence. It is mandatory upon the court to order Lamson "hanged by the neck until dead."

Conviction was obtained upon the contention by the state that the 31-year-old defendant, a former [illegible] pretty young [illegible] Lamson, to [illegible] bungalow home [illegible] with a blonde divorcee [illegible] mento, Calif.

Lamson will be taken [illegible] Quentin within ten days after [illegible] imposing of sentence.

An appeal for a new trial may be taken, according to defendant's attorneys, on the grounds of "errors by the court, misconduct of the district attorney and a verdict not supported by the evidence."

Lamson insists he stands squarely for either freedom or death.

Burial of Pottery

The burial of pottery and statuary of ancient cities has resulted from various circumstances. In many cases the city has merely decayed from age and collapsed. Destruction by war has been a frequent cause. Natural events, such as earthquakes and storms, etc., have also played an important part.

Laughing Around the World

A Thing Not To Be Explained

By IRVIN S. COBB

IT IS narrated of two colored men that they set forth one night to borrow a hog. Not until nearly daylight did they succeed in borrowing one from the pig-pen of a planter. Having slaughtered the prize they decided that it should be left in the cabin of one of them until the following night, when the other would come to claim his share.

During the day the present custodian, while immersing the carcass in a barrel of brine to prevent it from spoiling, decided that he needed all the meat for himself. Accordingly he removed it to a suitable hiding-place and then, returning home, awaited the arrival of his partner in the enterprise of the night before.

About eight o'clock the second negro arrived, carrying an empty sack over his arm.

"Whar's de meat, Sam?" he asked, as he entered the cabin.

"In dat barrel of brine over yonder behind de back do'. Jes' go over and he'p you'se'f to yore sheer."

The caller rolled up his sleeves and immersed his arms in the brine.

"Tain't no meat here," he said, after a thorough search.

"I ain't s'prised one bit," said Sam. "Rats is gettin' so bad 'round yere I don't know whut I'm gwine do. Dey carries off everything. I 'spects dey was eatin' dat po'k w'en I heard some rabbits today w'ile I was layin' down tryin' to sleep."

His friend stiffened suspiciously.

"How come dey could nibble a hole in de barrel, eat all de po'k an' still de brine don't run out?" he demanded.

Sam took a deep breath.

"Dat," he said, "is de mystery."

New Cuban Head Noted Surgeon

Dr. Ramon Grau San Martin, appointed by the Revolutionary Junta as Provisional President of Cuba, is that rara avis, a President who belongs to no political party. Forty-nine years old, wealthy and a bachelor, Dr. Grau San Martin comes of a distinguished family of Pinar Del Rio. He was educated at the University of Havana, where he afterwards held the chair of anatomy and won a reputation as one of Cuba's foremost physicians. In 1930 he was elected to head the students' directorate, which was then protesting the action of General Machado in closing the schools and colleges of the island. For his activities as a Machado oppositionist Grau San Martin spent 16 months in exile. His popularity with the powerful student body is credited with raising him to the highest post in Cuba.

IT TAKES HEALTHY NERVES

TURNER BREAKS OWN AIR MARK; WINS BENDIX CUP

Nerves Never Waver

LOS ANGELES — Colonel Roscoe Turner flashed across the finish line here 11 hours 30 minutes out of New York, breaking his own coast-to-coast record for the westward flight and winning the annual running of the Bendix Trophy.

Forty-eight thousand spectators were on hand to greet the plucky pilot whose healthy nerves had carried him to victory. For a second time the coveted [illegible] was his. One of the Colonel's first [illegible] was for a Camel. Asked by a [illegible] man if steady smoking [illegible] nerves, Turner [illegible]

"I WATCH MY NERVES as carefully as I do my plane," Colonel Turner says. "I smoke Camels for the sake of healthy nerves, and I enjoy them more because of their mildness and better taste. To me Camels are a much finer cigarette and I never have to give a thought to jangled nerves."

A MATCHLESS BLEND

IT IS MORE FUN TO KNOW

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

Steady Smokers turn to Camels

COLONEL ROSCOE TURNER, in discussing healthy nerves and cigarettes, says:

"Breaking air records is an exciting business—and a nerve-wracking one! I know because I have gone out after a whole flock of records—and managed to pick off quite a few. Like most pilots I smoke a lot—in fact, I enjoy smoking any time. But I watch my nerves as carefully as I do my plane. I smoke Camels for the sake of healthy nerves, and I enjoy them more because of their mildness and better taste. To me Camels are a much finer cigarette, and being a faithful Camel smoker, I never have to give a thought to jangled nerves."

Are you nervous? Irritable? Try Camels and get a fresh slant on your smoking. Being a milder cigarette, Camels are better for steady smoking. You will find that Camels never get on your nerves...never tire your taste.

Further Steps Needed

LEGISLATION to supplement the new federal securities act is in prospect, in the opinion of William B. Herlands, of New York, assistant United States attorney. Its enactment is believed assured unless proper steps are taken by stock exchanges or individual states to correct practices which the securities act failed to cover.

"The problem of fraudulent stock manipulantion,' Mr. Herlands says, "was the starting point of the investigation conducted by the senate committee on banking and currency, but this was entirely disregarded in the present securities act. Stock-market manipulation could be controlled by a statute regulating the stock exchange. Unless the stock exchanges of the individual states promptly undertake to remedy the more vicious stock-market practices, many competent observers believe that congress will pass regulatory legislation within the next year."

The securities act deals exclusively with the underwriting, the issuance and the distribution of stocks. There remain, says Mr. Herlands, "the equally important problems of the formation of corporations and stock-market manipulation after the initial distribution of secrities."

Adequate protection of the public will not be afforded until improper practices in connection with these activities are penalized. The securities act was a step in the right direction, but it was only a step. It would be better if the stock exchanges themselves or the states would regard it as a warning and act accordingly by completing the task. If they will not, however, there is little possibility that the federal government will refrain from doing the job. The matter is likely to come before the next session of congress, with the consequent danger that the latter may go further than conditions really demand.

This possibility could be avoided by the exchanges themselves cleaning house. So far, though, there has been little indication that this will be done.

Uniting the Americans

THE proposal of President Rodriguez of Mexico that an American league of nations be formed for dealing with international questions affecting the countries of this hemisphere contains interesting possibilities.

It recognizes that the American nations have problems peculiar to themselves and that means of solving these peacefully and without the intervention of outside agencies should be found. His suggestion for creating an association of American nations is expected to take concrete form at the Pan-American conference in Montevideo in December, when Mexican representatives will propose the formation of an inter-American court of justice and an inter-American labor office.

The Mexican president's ideas relative to binding the Americas together closely approach an economic Monroe doctrine for these nations. Economic cooperation of all American nations would be fostered under the plan.

To what extent his views may be regarded as reflecting those of other American nations is unknown. They bear a close resemblance, however, to policies of the United States in its relations with its southern neighbors, and Washington support for his program would cause no surprise.

This is not the first time such a plan has been advocated. The fact that the Mexican president now has taken hold of it is a promising development to those who believe the idea a practical and worthwhile one.

Cooperation among the nations of this hemisphere to foster peace and the economic welfare of the participants would be a development of world-wide importance. The movement is one deserving of the most serious study. That a workable plan can be agreed upon is a strong probability if recognized leaders in the different nations get behind it.

CHAPTER XXXIV

The worn front steps of the old Van Fleet house sagged under Mrs. Barstow's slight weight. The door bell jangled complainingly. After a long time there came the sound of shuffling steps, the door swung open grudgingly.

An old woman with a long yellow face, and a red checked shawl tied around her head and in a little knot under her chin, stared at her through the crack.

"You can wait in the parlor," she said when she understood it was a caller for the Misses Van Fleet.

How cold it was in the long, high-ceilinged room. How damp and musty! Mrs. Barstow fingered the carved mahogany davenport, with its faded red tapestry covering. Really very handsome. The heavy Persian rugs, soft as silk, glowing even in that darkened room, with the strong, vital colors of the East. But the stained wall paper, the mildew spots in the big engravings in their heavy gold frames . . . didn't they ever have a fire? And such a slatternly, crazy looking old servant!

Tick tock, tick tock, tick tock, the bronze clock on the white marble mantle ticked off the seconds sadly. Doors slammed shut, there came the sound of slippered feet dragging through the hallway. Then silence again.

Once she stood up to go. It was silly to wait so long in the cold, musty room. And still, to come all the way for nothing. . . .

Finally, the door opened, the old woman with the red shawl was back. "Miss Evvie is out," she said, "and Miss Babe is lying down."

"But I've come from San Francisco. Couldn't I—"

"You could come back," the old woman said, "some other time."

She stalked ahead into the hall, opened the big front door. "Good day, madam!" Lyla Barstow was being dismissed like a book agent. Bang! That was the door closing behind her.

The chill of the old house had struck into her very bones. She sat twenty minutes in front of the blazing fire at the Gray's just the other side of the hill, before she began to thaw out.

"And rude . . . Lottie, are they always so rude?"

Plump little Mrs. Gray laughed comfortably. "Always. Poor as church mice, and much too haughty to associate with any of us. So Curtis is interested in the girl . . . dear, dear. What's she like? I haven't seen her in years. Rather a beauty, isn't she?"

Mrs. Barstow nodded. "Yes, strikingly so. And I'm afraid Curtis is, well—serious. That's why I called—she has been so mysterious about them . . . what sort of girl was she, Lottie?"

"Oh, quiet little thing. Not like the girls nowadays. They never let her play with the other children. Of course, I know how you feel about Curtis . . . still, some of the flappers are terrible . . . simply terrible. Did you hear about the Hammond girl? The Leslie Hammond's Constance, you know. I had it from Carrie Pierson, you know what a gossip she is—so don't let it go any further, but . . ."

Mrs. Barstow listened, sipping her hot tea . . . the Hammond girl, who had been Curtis' partner at his first cotillion . . . what was the world coming to? At least, Joan was good . . . that was something . . .

* * *

Joan lay on the couch near the window, with a magazine propped up before her. She couldn't read. She wanted . . . what did she want? She didn't know. Impossible to be lonely with Maisie bustling back and forth every few minutes, but she was lonely . . . as lonely as Robinson Crusoe on his desert isle.

"Again!" Maisie scolded. "All that doorbell does is ring, ring, ring!"

"Why don't you let it ring and not answer it?" Joan grinned, stretching a long, slender foot in its yellow Chinese slipper.

"Well, I don't know . . . habit I guess," and she padded to the door, still grumbling.

"Oh!" It was Curtis, looking rather young and sheepish standing there in the doorway with his cheeks red from the wind, and a long florist's box under one arm. Such a big box, with a hole cut in one end, and long stems sticking out, like tails. Roses, of course. "Oh—I wasn't expecting to see you!"

"Can't I come in?" he asked, laughing, and stepping into the hall at the same time.

"Joan kind of wanted to be quiet today," she began doubtfully, but Curtis always over-awed her, and he was already pulling off his big coat.

"There's a man for you," Maisie exulted when he waived aside her feeble objections and sought Joan out for himself. "One in a million, an' I think she's getting to see it, if only she gets over her queer notions . . . I'll just go and get dinner for three . . . maybe he'll stay . . ."

"Why, Curtis Barstow! Didn't Maisie tell you to stay away from me and my cold!" But Joan held out both hands to him gladly, and her eyes, the color of the sea-green kimono, were flecked with happy light. "Curtis . . . I am glad you came . . . truly. And a box—what's in the box?"

With a little sob she went into his arms. "Curtis, don't ever let me go!"

"Open it and see." He smiled down at her gravely, not offering to help while her fingers struggled with the knots in the broad green tape. How lovely she was, with her ruffled golden hair, and the delicate ivory skin . . .

"La France roses! I haven't seen them since—oh, for so long—" She buried her face in their cool, wet fragrance. "Not since . . . I lived in the old house, with my aunts—"

"They were on some one's order. I made them give them to me. Old fashioned, aren't they? One doesn't see them often. So I lugged them up myself, to make sure of them!" He was touched by her delight in them . . . funny little girl, loving her flowers . . .

"They're like—like home," she said shakily. And the loneliness came back. Overwhelming loneliness, crushing her, frightening her. Old memories. Memories of the La France roses in the old garden across the bay. Of love and laughter, and another spring. Of promises that would never be fulfilled . . .

"Dear, you're crying!"

"No, I'm not!" She tried to laugh, but she couldn't. She saw it all. Clear as crystal. All the years to come. All the years of loneliness. Growing older and older, like Hogan in the shop. "Getting ahead," as Francine promised, getting ahead, and what for? What's the good of success when you're lonely, when you don't really belong to anyone, and no one belongs to you. Just growing hard and dry, without any hope, all the sweet, soft things denied . . .

And through the loneliness, through the forebodings that chilled her, through the sweet, heavy scent of the roses, she saw Curtis reaching out his arms to her.

With a little sob she went into them, hid her face against the rough wool of his sleeve. This was peace . . . this was rest . . . everything she needed . . . "Curtis, don't ever let me go!"

"My dear, of course I won't . . . Joan, you've never kissed me . . . will you?"

She gave him her lips, crying still.

"Johnnie, don't cry! It's nothing to cry about . . . because you love me, is it? Is it so bad as that? Didn't you want to love me, Joan?"

She was quivering in his arms, quivering as if she were afraid. "Johnnie, stop being foolish and smile at me . . . look up . . . tell me you do love me, Johnnie . . . You do, girl,—don't you?"

No putting it off any longer, no running away from it, she had to face it now.

"Don't you love me?" he was asking. "Don't you?"

And how could she tell? What answer was there to give him? Once she had thought she knew what love was. Once she had snatched it eagerly, in the pride and arrogance of youth. And the great flame of it had seared her heart, burnt it out, so that it could never take fire like that again . . . and maybe it wasn't real love after all, it couldn't have been . . . for real love lasts forever, and it didn't last . . . he went away, and forgot her . . .

And here was Curtis, good, loyal Curtis, loving her, and she loving him . . . or did she?

"How does anyone know?" she whispered. "How do you tell? I don't know—I don't know really!"

But she clung to him, pressed her wet face against his hot cheek, wouldn't let him go. "Joan, it means so much . . . answer me, dear, tell me the truth." She wouldn't answer, and he only knew that he loved her, and she was beautiful. She lay limp and relaxed in his arms, letting him kiss her again and again, her red lips parted, her wet eyes closed . . . "Don't ever let me go, Curtis, don't ever forget me . . . ever . . . promise me you won't . . ."

She kissed him then, and where she kissed him his face was wet, so that he knew she was crying still, crying, when he was telling her, trying to tell her of his love . . .

"Forget you, Joan? Don't you understand? I love you. I'm asking you to marry me, I'm not going away—"

"No, no—not that—not marriage, Curtis. Not now. Please, not now," she cried unreasonably, looking at him with haunted, swimming eyes. "I don't want to be married, not for a long time anyway. Please don't ask me. You won't ask me, will you? Please don't, Curtis—"

MOVIES

AT THE GRAND

The Grand Theatre offers you at least one mystery picture, this season, for which the management defies you to offer a solution.

It is Universal's horror-girded, thrill-laden film, "Secret of the Blue Room," which begins its engagement today.

At the climax, after the desperate death struggle between the last of the appointed victims and the killer, a battle in which the murderer is apprehended, you should have to be a veritable Sherlock Holmes to have identified the killer before he is unmasked.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Sylvia Sidney is starred in the film version of Theodore Dreiser's "Jennie Gerhardt," which comes to the Cliftona Theatre tomorrow and Wednesday. She plays the title, with Donald Cook, Mary Astor, H. B. Warner and Edward Arnold heading the supporting cast. Marion Gering directed the film, a B. P. Schulberg production for Paramount.

"Jennie Gerhardt" is the story of a woman who, as the result of her beauty and attraction for men, is caught by forces far too strong for her to battle. But she is, at the same time, ready to sacrifice everything for the man she loves.

Her first contact with life comes when an elderly Senator, deeply impressed by her naivete and charm, pays court to her. When he saves her brother from an impending jail sentence, she tries to repay his kindness. The Senator promises marriage on his return from a trip to Washington. But he is killed in a railroad wreck. Their child is born.

Jennie gets work as personal maid to a wealthy woman, and the latter's brother is attracted to her. This time Jennie knows real love and their next few years are blissfully happy. But when he discovers that she has a child, his whole attitude undergoes a change. In the events that follow, Jennie is helpless. The picture reaches a poignant climax in her attempts to right herself.

Anyway, this will go down in history as the world's gosh-awfullest hang-over.

Rapid Change of Sex

The oyster possibly holds the record for a rapid change of sex. The "native," for instance, may turn from male to female and back again as many as four times within thirteen months. The Portuguese and American oysters, strangely enough, know no such change, remaining male or female throughout life.

The Driftless Area

The driftless area in the United States includes several hundred square miles in Wisconsin and adjacent portions of Minnesota, Iowa and Illinois. It has never itself undergone glacial action of any kind. Just why this area should have escaped the glacial action that went on all around it is by no means clear and has never been absolutely explained.

Walk Your Way to Good Health and Well-Being

It Is the Ideal Exercise for All Ages, Says Dr. Copeland, Urging It as a Daily Habit

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

THE OTHER DAY I was amused by the sight of several adults roller-skating in a city park. Skating is a beneficial exercise, but everyone will agree that until one becomes expert there are many hazards connected with this form of recreation. Yet, it is gratifying to learn that this healthful exercise is again popular, particularly in the outdoor form.

I hope that interest in walking will now be revived. Many of you recall the days when walking was a popular sport in this country. Walking clubs and hiking parties were popular outdoor sports, indulged in by the young and old. Unfortunately, the interest in this health promoting exercise has greatly dwindled during the past few decades.

The value of walking as an exercise cannot be overstated. It is especially beneficial for those who require a certain amount of exercise and cannot indulge in strenuous performances, which to them are dangerous. Fortunately, walking is a form of exercise that is within the reach of everyone. It requires no equipment other than a good pair of shoes and the determination to walk.

A Good Exercise

Many constitutional ailments can be traced to the lack of exercise. Poor complexion, lack of appetite, indigestion, inability to sleep, constipation, headache, and irritability—these are a few signs of ill health that rapidly disappear when moderate exercise is taken. There is no better way to get it than in the form of walking.

Unfortunately, the increased popularity of automobiles has eliminated the need of walking. Going without it has influenced the health of the nation as a whole. I believe in the automobile, but let us not forget we have feet.

It is a mistake to neglect and overlook the value of walking. My advice is to walk whenever possible. In this way you will improve your health and protect against those ailments that result from lack of exercise.

When you walk keep the body erect, the head up and the abdomen in. The chest should be high and the shoulders thrown back. Relax and swing your arms freely from the shoulders as you walk. The toes should be pointed straight forward as you walk on the balls of your feet.

Don't Overdo

Probably you have not been accustomed to walking. In that case it is advisable that you begin with gradual amounts of this valuable exercise. Increase the length of your walks slowly and do not indulge in them to the point of fatigue.

There are those who avoid walking because they complain of pain in their feet. This is often due to some foot disability that requires medical attention. It is foolish to neglect the feet. Go to one who is expert in their care. You will bless me for this suggestion if you act upon it.

been as potent as an after-election peanut-crusher.

The Roosevelts are a loyal clan and F. D. R. has backed up his son. The only trouble is Young Jimmy is sometimes not too wise in his political selections. Two, particularly have come under fire.

One is John E. Donahue, a 30-year-old drug store clerk in Haverhill, Mass., named receiver of the closed Essex National Bank. The other is George C. Sweeney, named assistant attorney general in the Department of Justice.

Both appointments caused gasps of amazement. Sweeney about 35 years old, was mayor of Gardner, Mass. He had about eight years of legal experience, but much more important, was a "Before Chicago Roosevelt Rooter." One day Young Jimmy asked him: "How would you like to be an assistant attorney general?"

Jimmy apparently had the job of "assistant attorney general" confused with that of "special assistant." There are about 60 of the latter and only six of the former.

Anyway Sweeney came to Washington. Senator Walsh opposed the appointment but Attorney General Cummings got orders direct from the White House to give him the job. There was only one assistant attorney generalship left, and Sweeney got it. It happened to be the most important in the Department of Justice—in charge of "Lands."

At first he was the laughing stock of the Department. He forgot to get sworn into office, thereby missing $100 of his first month's pay. He was shy and reticent. But the funny thing is that he has now learned the ropes and turned out to be a pretty good executive—a lot better than some of his colleagues.

Perhaps Jimmy Roosevelt's other appointees will turn out the same way.

Jimmy has a lot to learn yet, but he isn't going to back down in Massachusetts. His motto is the reply of William Pitt to Horace Walpole: "It is no crime, sir, to be young."

World Jurists in Reichstag Arson Trial

EX PREMIER NITTI — REICHSTAG BUILDING AFTER FIRE — ERNST TORGLER

Denied official recognition by German authorities, the international committee of world-famous lawyers, including Arthur Garfield Hays, of the United States, ex-Premier Nitti, of Italy, Dr. Branting, of Sweden, as well as Dutch, French, British and Swiss jurists, will hold its own independent inquiry in London into the case surrounding the burning of the Reichstag Building in Berlin last February. Ernest Torgler, former Communist leader in the Reichstag, a Dutchman, Marius Van Der Lubbe, and three others are accused of the crime and are scheduled to go on trial at Leipzig. But anti-Hitlerites charge the whole business, fire and plot, was framed by Nazis as a propaganda feature and with the object of eliminating Torgler from German politics.

OHIO TO ASK PUBLIC OPINION IN DISTRIBUTION OF LIQUOR

COLUMBUS, Sept. 18.—Public opinion will be sought by the special liquor committee of the Ohio senate in studying methods of handling the distribution of intoxicating beverages when and if the 18th amendment is repealed.

Views of the public will be considered, according to the plans of committee members, in attempting to formulate an ideal system of liquor control for the state of Ohio.

As a part of the plan to tap public sentiment, the committee has arranged to conduct a series of hearings throughout the state, beginning at Dayton soon and carried in succession into other principal Ohio cities including Cincinnati, Cleveland, Akron, Toledo and Youngstown.

A questionnaire also has been prepared, seeking the views of newspaper editors throughout the state on the problem.

Particularly, it is understood, the committee will seek the attitude of the public upon a proposal to distribute liquor through a semi-public corporation.

PLAN INTRICATE

The corporation, which would be established with capital stock open to public subscription, would have the exclusive right to the sale of intoxicating beverages through local branches. The local branches, according to the plan, would sell the liquor in original packages for consumption off the premises.

Operation of the corporation would be under strict state control, and earnings of the concern, it is understood, would be limited, probably to six per cent.

The plan is believed to be the outgrowth of a recent study by the senate committee of the Canadian system of liquor control, and is designed particularly, it is said, to block the springing up of saloons.

Proponents of the plan point out also that the semi-public aspect of the corporation would take care of objections that have been expressed in some quarters to the state entering the liquor business.

An idea of the line along which the senate liquor committee is working may be obtained from the questions listed in the questionnaire being mailed to newspaper editors.

Some of the questions are as follows:

What plan of distribution of liquor and its control do you suggest?

Would you limit sales to government stores or dispensaries?

Would you allow hotels, restaurants and clubs to serve drinks with meals?

What, if any, regulations do you favor?

What do you consider the chief dangers in liquor distribution?

Do you favor the open sale of intoxicants at retail?

According to Senator Joseph Ackerman of Cleveland, a member of the senate liquor committee, one of the questionnaires will be sent to officials of the Anti-Saloon league.

IT's about time to get this absent-minded professor [illegible]. He's had quite a rest [illegible].

count of the football season, when the world knows that professors ain't so absent-minded, and even if they are, that ain't an excuse for the way they act.

But this professor that I heard about woke up in the night and found the alarm clock had stopped. His watch had stopped too, because he'd forgotten to wind it. He had to know what time it was, because he had to get up early in the morning to take a train to another football game.

So he went out in the yard and consulted the sun dial with his flashlight.

Ross-Co Society Plans Loan Exhibit At Elks' Hall Opening October 24

It is announced by the Ross-co Historical Society that a Loan Exhibit will be held at Elks' Hall, Chillicothe, beginning on October 24th and lasting through October 27th. The hall will be open from 3 to 5 p. m. and 7 to 10 p. m.

Ross-co and Chillicothe are rich in relics, curios and mementoes of the past century and a third, not only in reference to those localities, but of State-wide interest.

On previous occasions, particularly when the Centennials of Chillicothe and Ohio were celebrated, a vast number of articles, including manuscripts, antique furniture, household belongings and wearing apparel of the early settlers were displayed. The Historical Society has received as a bequest from the late M. Petrea McClintock and Anna P. McClintock Strong their home in Chillicothe, to be used as a Museum, as a memorial to their parents. This house will not be formally given to the Society until July 1934. In order to make known some of the valuable private collections of the county to the public, this present exhibit which is more extensive than any former one, has been organized. The material will come not only from the city but also from the countryside where many of the pioneers resided and where their descendants now live.

Each evening there will be a different program, including a costume parade, an historic playlet, musical entertainment, and a pageant. On one evening, Gov. White as speaker, will be the honored guest. Invitations have been issued to nearby cities and towns to attend this exhibit.

Other Historical Societies and similar groups in other Counties are arranging to make a pilgrimage to Chillicothe, the first capital of the State of Ohio, during the week of the Loan Exhibit.

this thing through."

The dramatic scene was said to have been a repitition of one which took place in Memorial Hall here in November of 1913, launching the campaign which resulted in the 18th amendment.

Prior to the pledge to carry on the fight for prohibition, Dr. Norman V. Peale, a native Ohioan who is now pastor of the Marble Collegiate Church of New York, urged the audience to "let the wets work out their own plan of liquor control" when and if prohibition is repealed.

"It's their baby; let them raise it," Dr. Peale declared.

The conference here was scheduled to be brought to a close today with the reading of pastoral assignments. Some difficulty encountered in placing the pastors, however, may delay adjournment until tomorrow.

KINGSTON

PLAN HOMECOMING

Kingston council has given free use of the streets for a Homecoming Festival to the Kingston band boys. The permission was granted at the last meeting of the council. The festival will be for the benefit of the Kingston band under direction of Earl Foley, council's only stipulation being that the band give the village the sum of $25 for the use of the electric current that they will need during the week which will begin Sept. 25 and continue throughout the week.

A program for this community celebration is being worked out by a committee. The band needs a competent instructor and new music and are taking this means to make the needed money.

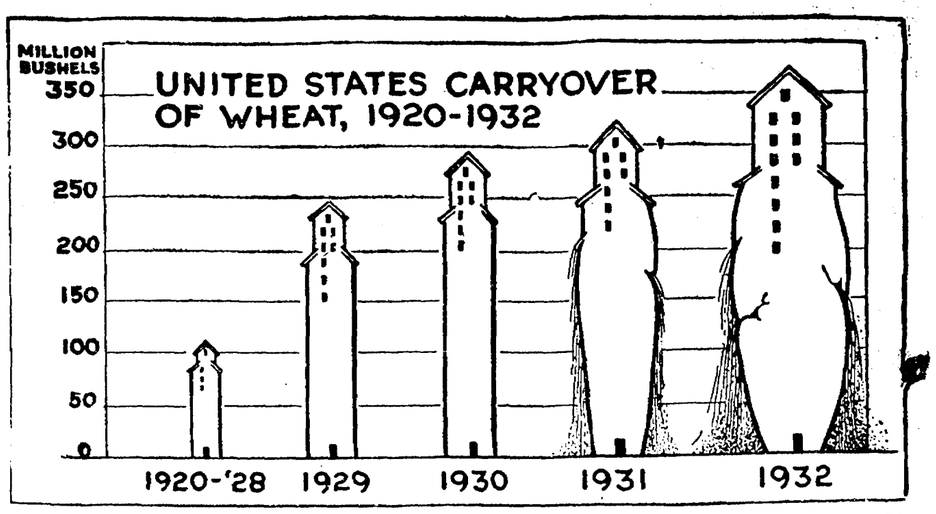
Europe's Tariff Walls

When Russia and Austria-Hungary were divided into nation states tariff walls set up by them ran through farms, in several instances, and the owners had to pay an import duty on milk that was carried from the pasture to the barn.—Collier's Weekly.



BURSTING wheat bins pictured above indicate how the carryover of wheat in the United States has increased since 1928. From 1920 to 1928 the carryover was about normal and a bin or grain elevator capacity of slightly more than 100 million bushels was sufficient for supplies from year to year. Since 1928 the carryover in the United States has increased rapidly. In 1929 it was nearly 250 million bushels, in 1930 it was nearly 300 million bushels, it was over 300 million bushels in 1931 and in 1932 it reached a new peak of more than 360 million bushels. Secretary Wallace has estimated that even with our short crop this year, the carryover will still be above normal a year from now because of the present large carryover, the lack of export demand and reduced feeding and, unless something is done to check it, the carryover is likely to jump again to around 350 million bushels in 1935.
